'Allies Can't Lose War'--Hoover

Warns of Idea Spreading In U. S. That Germany's War Machine Will Conquer Europe

SAYS SEA POWER DOOMS NAZIS

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Shuttling between the belligerent capitals of Europe during the first half of the World war as head of the Belgian commission; American food administrator, member of the war council, and of the board of trade; after the armistice delegated to restore economic life and feed the stricken people of Europe, eight years as secretary of commerce, and later as president of the United States Herbert Hoover today views the pending tragedy in Europe, from a position in many aspects unequalled by any living American. On the basis of first-hand knowledge of the forces that count in war, and of the part which resources and blockades play in the ultimate result, he is in a unique position to evaluate the situation confronting this nation.)

By ROY W. HOWARD
(Editor, New York World-Telegram)
(Published by Arrangement With The World-Telegram)

NEW YORK—England and France cannot be defeated, in the opinion of former President Herbert Hoover.

This opinion, and an analysis of conditions supporting it, were expressed by the former president today in answer to a belief voiced by the writer, that a dangerous emotionalism is diluting American reasoning; that the idea is spreading rapidly in certain sections of this country that France and England are facing defeat and, that in order to avoid catastrophe to civilization and to save ourselves the United States must sooner or later enter the European war.

"It is true," said Mr. Hoover, "there is the utmost danger in war times of emotions overwhelming common sense. The most regrettable thing that could happen to us would be the building up of a war party in the United States. But the premise of the ideas you mention is wrong.

"The war is only a month old. But the major factors are already emerging. The British and French can, and will, control the seven seas despite submarines and aeroplanes, and can sit there until their enemies are exhausted.

By their sea power the allies can protect England and all the outlying possessions of both empires from invasion. Their man power can defend France unless they blunder into taking wild adventures in military offensives and exhaust their man power. Aerial warfare may be destructive, but that works both ways, so far as all experience goes, is ot conclusive of any war.

"If one surveys the whole front—sea, land, air and economic resources—I am convinced the allies can defend their empires. The end may be victory for them. At worst it might be stalemate. I do not see any possibility that it can be defeat."

In view of the obvious importance of the American people moving on facts and not emotion, I asked Mr. Hoover to amplify this statement. He said.

"On the sea the British and French have naval strength of about 2,500,000 tons against Germany's about 500,000 tons. Russia, even if she comes in, which is improbable, has a negligible navy. Italy has about 600,000 tons.

German shipping is already driven off the seven seas in 30 days. Italy would have the same fate if she joined in, which at the present time appears also improbable. I am confident that our naval experts will confirm that this dominance of sea power may be damaged, but cannot be destroyed by aircraft.

The submarine may be troublesome, but there has been great progress in methods of detecting submarines since the last war, and this type of warfare is less dangerous than formerly. Even in the last war it had no major command of the seas.

Must Cross Seas To Move Troops

"The losses of merchant shipping in the first month are much less than in the first month after the intensive submarine attack began in the last war. The Allies may have lost perhaps 200,000 tons of merchant ships. They have 20,000,000 tons left, and can hire more. They cannot be starved out of either food or materials by any combination of European powers.

The enemy, whether it be Germany, or even Italy or even Russia, must cross the seas to invade with troops, either England or the British or French possessions in Africa, India, Australia, or the western hemisphere. Allied sea power will stop that.

"On the military front the sole point of attack is on continental France. France is protected by very much more powerful fortifications and armies than in 1914.

I am confident our military experts will confirm that it takes two or three times as many men on the part of attack to overcome the man power behind modern fortifications such as those which surround France. The French army is the best in the world.

"Germany has a population of about 80,000,000 Germans from which to draw man power. The Allied empires have about 115,000,000 white population and 30,000,000 more of fighting races which they can draw from to protect France. And their possessions contain another 450,000,000 people that can aid in food, raw material and munitions production. The Allies can put more men on the front and support them better than the Germans.

Russian, Italian Aid Improbable

"In view of events, Russia and Italy must also be considered in this army picture. While the entry of Italy with a population of 41,000,000 is highly improbable, even in such event the Allied man power on defense is still superior. I do not include Russian man power, because I am convinced that Russian troops are most unlikely ever to reach the western front.

That is inhibited by transportation difficulties, shortage of materials, internal weakness, a lack of any national purpose for the Russians, together with the risks to the Germans of such a guest. Those who think Russia might effectively invade India know little of that reality."

"Probably no man alive has had such experience in the economic pressure of war as you, Mr. Hoover. Germany surely must be prepared to eat, and to find materials, as well as to fight?" Was the next question.

"The economic front is as vital in this war as in the last war. In foodstuffs Germany starts the war on bread cards. Nobody can store very much food for long. Germany can obtain some breadstuffs and some meat from Poland, Russia and central European countries.

AUTOIST DIES

Injuries Fatal to Driver Who Struck Tree Near Nova.

NEW LONDON — Injuries received Sunday night when his car struck a tree near Nova in Ashland county today had caused the death in New London hospital of Oliver O. Roberts, 31, of North Canton.

Roberts suffered a punctured lung, crushed chest and head injuries, hospital attendants said. He died yesterday afternoon. The body was returned to Canton today for burial.

Roberts' car crashed into a tree one mile west of Nova on route 224 when a tire blew out, throwing him from the machine, deputy sheriff said.

Parachute Lands Behind Walls of Pen; Worry Turns To Laughter.

COLUMBUS —(NS)— Ohio penitentiary guards laughed today at an incident that had them worried for a short time.

Late yesterday a parachute floated over the prison wall and settled on the hospital building. Guards rushed to the scene, fearful that guns were being smuggled to inmates.

Later Warden Frank D. Henderson learned the safety device had been torn loose from a plane during a test flight.

Knickerbocker Sees Stares of War Dead

Two Young German Troops, 'Advance Guard' of Horrors To Come Brought Up To French Lines By Silent Frenchmen.

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER, INS Staff Correspondent.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY SOMEWHERE IN GERMANY, (By Courier to Paris)—Young French soldiers in the battle zone on the western front stood around the bodies of two young German infantrymen today and gazed.

The Germans stared with glassy-eyed intensity skyward. I watched the French. They stared with no less intensity upon these two members of the advance guard of the vast army of this war's dead.

Unfamiliar with what will soon be all too common the silence of these young Frenchmen before the dead was impressive.

A whisper broke it.

Poor fellow," one said. They all nodded.

Suddenly one Frenchman exclaimed:

"Hitler did that."

And from all of them came a quiet assent "it is true."

We were on the first official visit to the western front authorized by the French general staff for American correspondents.

(On Sept. 21st Kenneth Downs, Paris staff correspondent of International News Service, was one of a party of American newspaper men who made the first visit to the fighting front. Their trip was taken without official escort.)

400 Yards From Germans.

Our visit took us into the Maginot line as the first journalists in history to get an inside view of one of its forts It took us to the front line within 400 yards of the German troops

It gave ringside seats at an artillery duel and made us auditors at an argument of shells screaming in high trajectory over our heads

It brought us into Germany where the French have penetrated up to the purlieus of the Siegfried line.

But nothing brought home the irrevocable tragedy of this war so impressively as the first sight of the German dead.

They were motorcycle scouts and they were killed this morning as they were making a reconnaissance in Warndt forest. Both were about twenty years old, one blue eyed and the other brown eyed and the latter with a downy mustache. Both were clad in the field gray of the old German army and like their (Continued on Page 5, Col. 3)

Will Congressional Debate Affect Neutrality Poll Here?

Will the dramatic debate now taking place in Washington, change the attitude of millions of Americans vitally interested in the outcome, as to whether or not America should furnish war supplies to Europe? Will it be reflected in The News-Journal's poll of "home folks" on the neutrality bill?

More than 1,000 residents of Mansfield and vicinity already have expressed their opinions on this question, with 737, or 79 per cent in favor of the present neutrality law which forbids the sale of arms to warring nations. Twenty-one per cent, or 216, are for repeal of the embargo advocated by President Roosevelt.

Two veterans senators of the World war are the leaders in the debate — Senator William Borah of Idaho and Senator Key Pittman of Nevada.

In Borah's opening address yesterday he charged that the cry for repeal came from the "warhounds of Europe." In answer to Pittman's assertion that the present neutrality law actually favors German in its effect, Borah said:

"If the law is not acting neutrally in the European war, what business is it of ours? The question is whether we passed it impartially. Because the tide is running one way or the other has nothing to do, so far as law-making is concerned, with the question of strict-neutrality."

Pittman, in presenting the bill calling for repeal of the embargo, said that many persons mistakenly believe that a prohibition against the sale of American armaments to belligerents "will entirely eliminate us from any part in the destruction of human lives during the war."

Readers of The News-Journal who are interested in the outcome of this debate may read both sides of it in each day's paper and then vote the ballot which appears in each issue. Today's ballot is on page 8. Mark it and mail it to the Neutrality Editor.

LOGAN'S DEATH HALTS DEBATE

Kentucky Senator, Roosevelt Supporter, Stricken; Oratory on Neutrality Delayed.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—The unexpected death of Sen. Marvel Mills Logan of Kentucky took one of President Roosevelt's supporters from congress today and brought an interruption in the tense struggle over neutrality legislation

The 65-year-old Democrat, who had been a member of the senate since 1931, died of a heart attack early in the morning He had a slight heart attack Saturday night and another early last night He missed yesterday's session, the start of neutrality debate.

Logan was a figure in Kentucky politics since 1910, starting out as a county judge and then serving, in succession, as assistant attorney general, attorney general, chairman of the tax commission, appellate judge, and chief justice of the state.

Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, announced the senate would meet today only to adjourn out of respect to "this statesman of the highest quality."

DANZIG —(U.P.)— The German campaign against Poland ended today where it began Sept. 1, as the last of 4,000 Polish troops and sailors from the naval base on Hela peninsula surrendered.

Prime Minister Recalls 'Broken Past Promises'

Declares 'No More Assurances' On Part Of Nazi Government Will Be Accepted; Blasts At Veiled Threat If Allies Don't Bow To German-Red Demands.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Prime Minister Chamberlain declared today that Britain would "examine and test" any German peace proposals, but added that "no mere assurances from the present German government can be accepted by us."

Britain and France, the prime minister told a wildly cheering house of commons, will not yield to what he termed a "scarcely veiled threat" of Soviet-German collaboration.

"No threat would ever induce this country to abandon the purpose for which we have entered upon this struggle," he said.

The prime minister's speech retorted to the Russian-German agreement which partitioned Poland and made a peace gesture with the alternative of Nazi-Soviet "consultation."

He declared "no mere assurances" from the German government could be accepted because that government "too often in the past have proved that their undertakings are worthless when it suits them that they should be broken."

Won't Be Forgotten.

He then added that "if, therefore, proposals are made we shall certainly examine and test them in the light of what I have just said."

Nobody wants the war to continue "for one unnecessary day," he asserted adding that the British and French people, however, were "determined to secure that the rule of violence shall cease and that the word of governments—once pledged—must henceforth be kept."

Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, was beside the prime minister on the treasury bench as he spoke. Soviet Ambassador Ivan Maisky hunched pensively over the rail of the diplomatic gallery.

Chamberlain told the house that the Soviet-German agreement by no means meant Germany would receive any lasting benefits and contained nothing to swerve Britain from "what we are doing now—mobilizing all the resources of the British empire for the effective prosecution of the war."

Bitterly Chamberlain assailed the Russian-German statement that if the western powers refused peace offers they would bear the war guilt.

Assails "War Guilt."

BERLIN: Hitler's Program Embraces 3 Points, Nazis Say

BULLETIN

BERLIN—(AP)—The authoritative service Dienst Aus Deutschland expressed the belief today that Germany and Soviet Russia would consult each other again just as soon as the western powers declare their attitude toward the Moscow declaration which Germans consider an offer of peace.

(By United Press)

BERLIN—Adolf Hitler has completed his plans for the next phase of the war with a three part program, it was understood today.

Nazi sources indicated that he had outlined his plans fully to Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, as follows:

1—A "peace offensive" in an effort to induce Great Britain and France to call off the war on his and Josef Stalin's terms.

2—Military action in event the "peace offensive" fails.

3—Re-organization of eastern Europe in agreement with Russia—and incidentally Italy—as the result of the Russo-German partition of Poland

A break in the "peace offensive" was expected within the next few days, to be followed by a reichstag meeting at which Hitler proposed, on the assumption that Britain and France would reject the terms of the Nazi-Communist partners, to deliver a "peace ultimatum."

Nazis intimated that final preparations for Hitler's campaign were discussed during Ciano's visit. Ciano was believed to have taken to Mussolini an outline of the peace ultimatum speech which Hitler already was drafting

ROME: Ciano Arrives In Rome To Give Duce Hitler's Message

(By Associated Press)

ROME—Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano returned today from talks with Adolf Hitler, bearing word which may be a factor in either European peace negotiations or a turn for the worse in the European war

He arrived by train at 10:20 a. m. (4:20 a. m., EST)—20 minutes after the Italian cabinet convened under the presidency of Premier Mussolini.

The concensus among foreign observers and Italian sources was that Ciano probably brought a proposal from Mussolini's axis partner that Il Duce intercede with the British and French for acceptance of the Hitler offer of peace based on the German-Soviet Russian partition of Poland.

The people fixed their attention on Mussolini to see whether a public gesture by him would confirm this thesis.

Italians, privately eager to know whether Germany had demanded that Italy immediately fulfill her military pledges as axis partner of Germany, received no hint from published accounts of Ciano's visit to Berlin.

Italy's desire to keep clear of the war seemed as strong as ever informed circles said they expected Italy to keep her present non-belligerent status as long as possible and at least for some time to come.

These quarters expressed belief a call by Germany for Italian help would come only when aid actually was needed, and that such a request now would be a sign of German weakness.

Americas O. K. 'Safety Zone', Notify Warring Nations

MAKE DEMAND FOR 'RIGHTS' OF NEUTRALS

Belligerents Given Notice of 10-Point Plan Adopted by 21 Republics.

(By Associated Press)

PANAMA — Twenty-one American republics, having outlined a western safety zone to insulate them from the European war, today started formal notification to belligerents of their action.

At the suggestion of United States Under-Secretary Sumner Welles, President Juan Demostenes Arosemena of Panama was requested by the inter-American conference to communicate to warring nations the neutrality declaration adopted last night.

The republics voiced their intention of "remaining apart from the European conflict," but declared they would demand their "proper rights" as neutrals. Some delegates called the declaration of Panama a "complement to the Monroe Doctrine." They said it established for the first time "continental American seas."

The declaration asserted neutral American republics "have the indisputable right to preserve free from all hostile acts" the waters adjacent to the American continents.

Failure of belligerents to recognize the zone would bring "necessary measures" to be decided upon after consultation.

The declaration of "general neutrality" allowed each country to adopt its own method of making it effective and fixed uniform standards, rights and obligations of neutrals with belligerents.

Other measures said the nations:

1. Shall not permit their territories to be used as bases for belligerent activities,

2. Shall bar belligerent warships from their ports or waters in numbers of more than three at a time and permit their presence for not longer than 24 hours.

3. Shall demand that belligerent craft seeking hospitals in American zones respect neutrality laws and regulations.

4. Shall hold flights of belligerent aircraft over American territory to be a neutrality infraction.

5. Shall be authorized to station guards aboard belligerent merchant vessels in American ports and intern such ships for excessive delay in port.

6. Shall permit transfer "in good faith and without resale" of belligerent vessels to neutral American republics.

7. Shall bar armed merchant vessels from entering their ports when the boats carry more than six-inch cannon on their prows. These vessels shall not have reinforced sides or other offensive equipment.

10. May exclude belligerent submarines, or admit them on condition they enter afloat flying the flag of their nation.

Traffic Tag Campaign Takes Sharp Drop

Up and Down THE STREET

Although most Mansfielders got a "Sorry, no more seats left" note when they tried to buy tickets for the Cincinnati world series games, at least one Mansfielder had better luck. He's Henry Brinkman, North Main street merchant, who managed to get a pair of seats for the games at Cincy. Friends have besieged him with offers to buy 'em, offering everything but a first mortgage on the old homestead, but being a native of Cincinnati, Henry has turned 'em all down, and will take in the games himself. He won't say yet who's going with him.

Class consciousness and social distinctions can be carried to interesting lengths, according to Mrs. David N. Roller, Euclid avenue. The other morning the garbage collector appeared at her home sporting a very swank cigaret holder. When she asked him if it wasn't a little awkward to handle it while on the job, he said: "Well, I'm collecting in Woodland today, and the days I go to Woodland, I always use a holder for my cigarets."

"Skippy," Sheriff E. P. Long's dog, helps the sheriff's deputies guard the county jail, but he must find a favored position to do it. The dog jumps on top of the desk in the sheriff's office and stretches out with his head resting on a stack of magazines. From that position he can watch the cell blocks and look out the window. Long suspects, however, that "Skippy" is more interested in "spotting" another dog to fight than he is in watching prisoners.

TEACHERS HEAR PLEA FOR LEVY

Miller Cites Need for 3-Mill Renewal as Association Elects Officers.

Superintendent of Schools W. L. Miller voiced a plea for support of the three-mill levy for school operating expenses at the November election when he addressed the Mansfield City Teachers association at Senior high school last night.

Miller pointed out that the three-mill levy would not be a new tax but the renewal of one now in effect. He added that it provides the schools with approximately 30 per cent of their operating funds.

During the evening the teachers elected new officers for the year. W. W. Blauser, assistant principal of John Simpson Junior high school, was chosen president, succeeding Harold Miller of the Senior high school faculty. John Correll, Hedges junior high, was named vice president, and Miss Margaret Black, West Fifth street school, secretary-treasurer.

The executive board members elected were Edwin Fensch, John Simpson Junior high; Miss Mary Engwiller, Western avenue school; Miss Helen Myers, Hedges; and Harold Miller, retiring president.

Ballots also were cast for delegates to the January conference of the Ohio Education association in Columbus and the results will be announced later, officers said.

HUNTER APPOINTS BERG, FILLS COUNCIL PRESIDENT VACANCY

George L. Berg, veteran municipal legislator was named president of city council today by Mayor Claude M. Hunter to fill the office left vacant two months ago by the death of Karl P. Troll.

The selection of Berg, who was president pro-tem, had been expected although Mayor Hunter has been marking time on the appointment.

Berg's appointment became effective yesterday. He will serve until Dec. 31 when either

GEORGE L. BERG

Howard G. Miller, a Democrat, or W. C. Mansfield, Republican, both candidates for the office at the November election, will take over the post. Berg, a Democrat, is a candidate for reelection as councilman-at-large.

Naming of Berg cost the Democrats their 5 to 4 majority in council, at least temporarily. Both parties now have four members in council. As president Berg has no vote except in case of ties.

At the regular monthly council meeting tonight, the Democrats are expected to nominate Philip Smith, former councilman-at-large and a candidate for that office in the November election, to fill the vacancy created by appointment of Berg as council president.

Even if the Republicans should place a candidate in the field for the vacancy and a tie vote resulted, Berg would cast the deciding vote for the Democratic nominee, Democratic councilmen pointed out.

Illinois Couple Hurt Near Here as Car's Forced Off Road.

Two Champaign, Ill. residents suffered minor body bruises and lacerations at 7:50 a. m. today when their car was forced off the highway and into a ditch, one mile east of Jeromesville on route 30, by another machine traveling in the same direction.

George L. Beatty, 68, driver of the car, and his wife, Katherine, 60, were hurt, state highway patrolmen reported. Both received minor lacerations about the head. They were treated in the office of a Jeromesville physician.

The car was forced into the ditch by a machine bearing a Pennsylvania license as it started to pass Beatty's auto, highway patrolmen were told. The Pennsylvania car failed to stop after the accident, patrolmen said. Beatty and his wife were en route to Champaign when the accident happened.

LAFF-A-DAY

"Look, Henry—just like old times."

Chief Says Decrease Due to Less Overtime Parking, Says 'All-Day' Parker Routed.

Either the police department's eight-month-old "sustained law enforcement campaign" is bogging down or Mansfield motorists are observing the parking regulations better than they were six months ago

This was revealed today in the monthly report of activities of the police department which showed that only 157 traffic tickets were issued during September.

This is little more than five tickets a day as compared with a 16 ticket-day-average set during February when a total of 449 traffic violators were cited for infractions of the code at the outset of Police Chief Meade K. Bates' campaign for "stricter" enforcement of the parking regulations.

The department created a "cycle patrol" to cover the downtown district after two new motorcycles were purchased and more than 300 tickets were issued monthly through July.

In August the ticket campaign dropped to 232 violators and last month fell to 157.

Claims Less Violations.

Bates said today that the decrease in traffic tickets issued by the department was due to "less overtime parking." He claimed that the "all-day" parker had been driven outside the restricted area by the continued program against parking violations.

Some merchants were of the opinion however that the overtime parker had returned and revived talk of the parking meter plan which was sidetracked by council last March as the result of the traffic campaign at that time.

A rise in the number of accidents in the city during September also was noted in the report while arrests for speeding and careless and reckless driving showed a decrease.

During the month 102 accidents were reported, the highest for any month since last December when 104 were listed.

Arrests in the traffic division last month totaled 19 as compared with 21 in August. There were four persons arrested for speeding and five for careless and reckless driving, one less on each charge than in August.

PHILADELPHIA — (INS) — A three-pronged investigation was reported underway today into the activity of former rum-runners who have allegedly turned to smuggling fuel oil, food and drinking water to German submarines off the Atlantic coast.

Naval intelligence officers, G-men and the U. S. customs office were said to be checking a list of known rum runners of the prohibition era supplied by Edward C. Dougherty, local federal alcohol tax collector.

Philadelphia G-men declined to comment on the investigation other than to remark they had "suspicions of some seamen."

One source reported the alleged smugglers were employed by several Germans living in this city.

15-Year-Old Boys Released In Custody of Relatives.

Two 15-year-old members of a gang of boy burglars had been paroled to relatives today by Judge C. J. Anderson in juvenile court under suspended industrial school sentences.

Cited several days ago by police, the youths had been held in the county detention home. A third member of the group was sent to the Boy's Industrial school at Lancaster.

One of the boys under parole is a first offender while the other had been involved in previous offenses. The boys confessed burglarizing several Mansfield homes and parked cars.

FAIR ENOUGH!

Everyone In U. S. Seems to Want to Keep Us Out of War, for Many Reasons

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—For once, anyway, the American people seem to be agreed, but only in a weird, acrimonious way. The whole nation is determined to keep out of the Hitler-Stalin revival of the World war, but the agreement on that common purpose is as bitter as any conflict could be, short of actual violence. It is a strange irreconcilable unanimity, more French than American.

The president and the administration want to keep out of war and Mr. Borah and the other isolationists feel the same way. Henry Ford, Colonel Lindbergh, Fritz Kuhn, the anti-American bund, the American Legion, the Republicans, the Communists, the Capitalists, Earl Browder, Mr. Hearst, Father Coughlin, Norman Thomas and to make it unanimous, George Spelvin, the average American, all oppose American participation.

Yet there is furious strife over the reasons why individuals and elements of the nation belong to this united front and neighbors who stand elbow to elbow along the line question not only the motives but the sincerity of those arrayed beside them.

Mr. Browder has abandoned the old Communist united front against Fascism which strove to arouse in American workmen and college students a spirit that would drive the country to war not on Russia's side but as Russia's substitute.

Now that Soviet Russia and Nazi Germany have acknowledged their common character and purpose, he is opposed to any American military action against Hitler. Thus the Community league against War and Fascism becomes a League against War gainst Fascism, which is a difference vastly greater than the substitution of one little word for another.

But Mr. Browder accuses Lindbergh, Hearst and Coughlin of a hidden purpose of driving the country to war on Britain's side, which is a queer and confusing charge, considering the records of these men.

The only doubt of Lindbergh's motives that has been raised in debate arises from his personal relations with some German leaders and with those British who were described, perhaps too glibly, as pro-Germans.

If Lindbergh is friendly to these people and their point of view surely he would not desire that the United States fight against them.

Mr. Hearst has always been anti-British. His news service was expelled from Britain in the first World war for lack of sympathy with the allied cause, at considerable cost to him. Years later, the French asked him to be absent from their country, a faux pas which can hardly be said to have endeared France to him.

Father Coughlin is not easily understood on any issue, but he comes of rebel Irish, anti-British stock and his late bishop was actively anti-British the last time.

Mr. Ford, at times, has been accused of Fascist tendencies, and he was once, for a spell, actively anti-Semitic. But if this evidence be valued 100 per cent that would place him alongside Mr. Browder on the American united front against war, Mr. Browder himself being now a Fascist, or worse, a Nazi, by political marriage.

Mr. Kuhn has obvious reasons which need not be examined for hidden ideas. It is his plain, simple mission to prevent, if he can, the enlistment of another strong nation against his Fatherland. He doesn't have to make any pretense. Mr. Thomas has high, virtuous motives which he expresses in orations of great beauty, and the capitalists realize that if we should go to war capitalism would be unable to pay the cost and would crash into Bolshevism or Naziism at the end. As capitalists they can't be Communists or Nazis, so they would seem to have clean hands.

Another element, too mixed or confused for classification, which opposes American involvement is that glamorous but not necessarily large group of Communists and bleeding hearts who squirted scorn over the pallid and irresolute Mr. Chamberlain after Munich. In his surrender to Hitler that time Mr. Chamberlain was said to have betrayed Democracy.

But now that he has made the dreadful decision to fight, the same persons who berated him then accuse him of fighting an imperialistic war. The Communists are particularly rude in their taunt of imperialism, but only since Stalin joined Hitler and the war in defense of Poland became, indirectly, a war against Russia, too.

Mr. Spelvin on his part, and I dare say Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Borah, the Legion and the Terre Haute Rotary club, have reasons for their stand in this queer American united front which need no examination and permit of no doubt. They just want to keep out of war, period.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Mr. Kay Kyser from Rocky Point, North Ca'lina, isn't goin' to be any movie clothes-hoss.

Mr. Kyser, by reason of making his movie debut in the same picture with Adolphe Menjou, was square up against the dressing problem the first day he faced the camera.

Adolphe, by virtue of his years of fame as a best-dressed actor, was quick to dispense advice to the newcomer, who has become famous, at 33, as conductor of a band and an air "college of musical knowledge." Adolphe's advice, summed up, was "See my tailor."

Now Kay Kyser is a plain-looking blonde chap, who wears specks and smokes a cigar and draws homely similes and metaphors.

Said Kay:

"I cain't wear any fancy clothes. There's just some people who cain't—and I'm one of 'em. Why, if I get myself duded up in tailor-mades, the folks in Rocky Point might tar and feather me. They'd say, 'Look at the hundred-dollar saddle on that ten-dollar mule.' But I'm agreeable. I'm going to try his tailor. I don't think it'll do any good. Look at this suit, now—"

The plain brown number he wore—the upper buttons of his trousers loosened for comfort—was not exactly a tailor's dream.

"I've got this suit, and two others," he said. "Both the others are blue. I never cared much for clothes—besides I don't have any time to get myself dressed up. Always rehearsing, or playing, and most of the time I wear an old sports jacket and a pair of slacks—both ready-made. For a New York opening once I thought I'd get me a new tuxedo. For once, I'd do it in plenty of time. I had all the fittings, and the usual thing happened—just before the show I got a call from the tailor. He was sending the coat, but he'd need a little more time on the pants. I had to dig out my old frayed tux trousers, race with 'em up and down the hotel hall to air out the mothball smells, and at opening time I took the stand wearing 'em—mothball smell and all."

The lad who has built his 13-man orchestra into one of the nation's leading attractions has not, however, been entirely thoughtless of clothes. Ever since he arrived, all during musical recordings for "That's Right, You're Wrong," Kay has been reminding Dave Butler, the director-producer, of his wardrobe shortage.

"I'd tell him," said Kay, "and he'd say 'H-mm, yes. Now about that line in the script—.' Then I'd tell him again, and Dave would say, 'Him-m, yes—now about that spotlight, Jack—.' And I'd keep telling him—but some day I guess I'll get a call to show up in a suit I haven't got, and then they'll know I'm telling the truth: I've really got just three suits, no more. But maybe that's Hollywood. The boys in the band, too, they haven't anything to wear. We've got to figure on that or they'll be getting up on the stage in their shorts."

CHAPTER XX.

They had reached the house, and as they were about to go in Craig paused a moment, and said: "You don't have to tell what you learned from me, do you, Mr. Stone?"

"No, Craig; not at present, anyhow. But some day soon, I want you to be frank with me."

And they went in the house and took their separate ways. Stone went in search of Everett Ames. He found him in the study, his desk spread out with papers, and Ames himself looking tired and a little bewildered.

"I say, Stone," the secretary looked up from his work, "I can't do this sum. I know my limitations, and while I'm the best secretary in captivity, I can never get through with this backwash of stuff. Mr. Madison was a systematic and careful man, as a rule, but unimportant papers, he often left to take care of themselves."

"Pitch 'em out. Why worry with the unimportant ones?"

"But they're all mixed in together. And it isn't only that. Also, there are stocks and securities, that would seem to be lapsed or discontinued or something, but I daren't throw them away, for they may be of value. Of course, Miss Madison can't help me in these things, and the boys know rather less than their aunt, I'd like to get a professional, a certified accountant or somebody like that, and have him set me straight."

"Just the thing! Do that by all means. It's due to yourself, you can't be expected to do two men's work. They'll willingly pay for it. There isn't a mean hair in any Madison head."

"I know it. I'll put it up to Miss Cornelia, though; I hate to ask the boys."

"I'll speak to Miss Madison. I know it will be all right. See here, Ames, have you found any real documents or letters about the Village complexity? Not just notes or memoranda."

"I haven't found much. I've put them all together. Here they are, but nothing of any significance. I'm afraid. I wish we could pin the murder on some one of those disgruntled citizens."

"To remove suspicion from the family. I doubt if you know it, but there's a strong feeling against Craig."

"On what grounds?"

"Two principally. That he wanted his inheritance without waiting any longer, and that he was mad at his uncle for stealing his girl."

"Miss Verne wasn't Craig's girl, was she?"

"They weren't engaged, but he hoped they would be. It seems Mr. Madison told Craig he wanted Miss Verne for his own, and I thought that was decent of him. And Craig agreed,—Mr. Madison told me this himself. Then when the uncle won out, Craig just couldn't stand for it, and he let his angry passions rise and did for the usurper."

"How did he get in that locked room?"

Ames looked at the detective with a comical glance.

"The only way there was to get in."

"And what was that way?"

"Lord, man! I don't know, any more than you do."

"What became of the instrument that killed him?"

"It's here, in the safe; the examiner asked me to put it away in safe keeping, so I did."

"Let me see it again."

"Sure," Ames opened the safe and brought out the deadly weapon.

"Just a straight piece of metal that looks like steel; about three inches long and sharply pointed at one end," he commented.

"This other end was cut off with a wire-cutter," Stone said, musingly. "See, it shows that it took two cuts to do it."

"Is that of importance?"

"Probably not; it only indicates that the wire was cut by an inexperienced hand, or with a dull tool. What is it? or what was it before it was cut?"

"A knitting needle."

Stone looked up, surprised.

"How do you know?" he said.

"My mother used to knit a lot. She had every sort of needles. This, she would call a fine one. But she had them still finer. This is not quite as big as the lead in a lead pencil. Mother had some no thicker than a good-sized pin."

"Curious weapon to kill a man with."

"But a clever one. They say you found it just in time. A little later and it would have been all drawn into the flesh out of sight."

"I don't know how I happened to think of it. Now where would a murdering villain get a knitting needle?"

"From his mother or sister or daughter, or his next door neighbor."

"Don't be funny. Does anybody in this house knit?"

"I never saw Miss Cornelia do such a thing, and the rest of us are men."

"A most exasperating case. Nothing to work on!"

"I thought bizarre clues were the most helpful. Isn't that bizarre?"

"No; just odd. Well put it away; it may be wanted for evidence."

Stone went to the living-room, and found most of the household gathered there.

He sat down by Cornelia, and said, casually: "Have you any knitting needles. Miss Madison?"

"No, not one. I used to knit, in war times, but, about then, my eyes began to trouble me, and I gave all my needles away, and all the wools I had left, too. Why, do you want a knitting needle? Hetty will get you some down in the village."

"No, I don't want any. But, I think now, that was a piece of a knitting needle that killed your brother."

"Oh, why, maybe it was!" Cornelia looked thoughtful. "Isn't that a clue, then?"

"Perhaps; though not a very definite one. I suppose a man could get a knitting needle if he wanted to."

"Yes, of course. Was it a piece broken off of a long needle?"

"Cut off, more likely. Those things don't break; they bend."

"Oh, listen to this!" cried Anita, who was reading an afternoon paper.

She read aloud: "Miss Yvette Verne, the famed film star, left the city today, en route for Hollywood. Miss Verne is contemplating a new picture, the name of which cannot, as yet, be divulged. Rehearsals will not begin for a fortnight, but the actress wishes to be on the grounds during preparations."

"My heavens," exclaimed Sheldon, "how can you sit there all nice and pretty, when you are at this time en route to Hollywood?"

Yvette laughed gaily, though as Anita read the bit of news, her face looked startled and even frightened.

Stone, watching, saw her recover quickly, and force a smile.

"How silly!" she said. "That's what I had to go to see about yesterday. The manager had planned for me to start for Hollywood today, but when I told him of the circumstances here, of course he said I must wait as long as necessary. And, so sure was he, or rather, the press department, that they had written that notice and released it before I arrived. I suppose it was too late to get it back, so it had to stand."

"How were you to travel?" Anita said.

"I don't know. On a special train, I suppose."

"It says here, you went in an airplane."

"Nonsense! I never ride in airplanes. I get fearfully airsick if I do."

But the girl's face had turned red, and her lip quivered from sheer nervousness. She managed to laugh, and said, "Never believe anything you read about moving picture people! It never is true."

"Is that so?" said Anita.

It was Saturday, the day after Harley Madison's funeral. All had gone off without accident of any sort, which greatly relieved Cornelia's mind, and she was now superintending the restoration of the house to its usual condition of order.

Hetty appeared before her.

"Miss Cornelia," she said, "Wilkins can look after things downstairs, and Elk and me, we're going to turn out Mr. Madison's room. We're goin' to air it and vaccume it and scrub and shine up everything. I know it'll be a comfort to you to know that's done."

"Yes, Hetty, do all you've said, but speak to District Attorney Sutton about it first. You know how he objects to having anything touched."

"Land's sake, Miss Cornelia, he ain't goin' to keep that up forever, I hope!"

"I don't know, but you must ask him, anyway. Or I will."

"You do it, Miss Madison, please. I don't like to."

Cornelia went in search of the assistant district attorney, and told him of the matter.

"Why, yes, Miss Madison," he said. "I see no reason way the room shouldn't be put in order. We investigators may be here some days longer, but I begin to think this crime must go down in history as an unsolved mystery."

"You mean you can't find out who killed my brother!"

"I fear so. You see, it is what we call a simple crime, and they are the hardest to solve."

"What do you mean by a simple crime?"

"That we have the plain facts of the death and the manner of it, and we have the condition of the securely locked room. And we cannot seem to make them mutually possible."

"But I thought Mr. Stone could discover a way into any locked room."

"Mr. Stone has not yet given up. He will not accept defeat. But we policemen are guided by strict rules and regulations. If we cannot get nearer to a solution than we are now, we will soon be ordered to shelve the case. That does not mean that it cannot be reopened, if circumstances require."

Cornelia looked displeased.

Then she said: "If you policemen give it up and go away, can Mr. Stone continue his efforts?"

"Yes, if he chooses; and if you choose to retain him."

"I hope it may yet be found out. I hope you will not give up unless you are ordered to."

Sutton looked at her intently.

"Would you not rather stop the inquiry, than to find it pointed to a member of your family?"

"There can be no such possibility."

"I did not accuse a member of your family," Sutton said, gently; "but to have suspicion directed toward him, however wrong such suspicion may be, must surely be painful for you."

"Will you please tell me exactly what you have in mind?"

"Yes, since you ask. We find that some indications point to Mr. Craig Madison."

Cornelia sat up very straight, and she said:

"What you imply is an utter falsehood. No Madison could commit a crime, and my nephew is incapable of disloyalty in thought, word or deed."

"Nor did I say he had done any wrong." Sutton's manner was as stern as her own. "I spoke of indications, of motive."

"And pray, what motive do you impute to a man to kill his own uncle and benefactor?"

"Motives are there, Miss Madison. Young Craig is and was madly in love with the girl to whom your brother became engaged. He could scarce bear to see her taken from him by another man. Also, Craig was very much displeased at the idea of Harley Madison giving such enormous sums to the village. And, if his uncle married Miss Verne, the young man must assume that the great fortune he possessed might be denied to the village, but would be willed to her. That evening, therefore, Craig saw taken from him the girl he wanted, and the fortune he had long looked upon as, in good part, his."

"I don't support, Mr. Sutton, that anything I can say would show you how wrong you are. If you were saying something less dreadful and less absurd, I might reason with you, but what you say, is so far outside of all reason, that I shall not even comment on it."

THEATERS

AMERICAN PEOPLE will have an opportunity to see an especially significant film story of the British navy this month with the release of the latest issue of March of Time, entitled "The Battle Fleets of England." The production was started two months ago, before the rigid censorship was clamped on, but was completed after Britain declared war. All of it, of course, had to pass the pre-war censorship. . . . Republic pictures, operating on the theory that Americans get enough war through the newspapers and radio, will make no pictures based on the current conflict. Other studios are fighting for screen rights to war stories. One of Republic's most ambitious pictures of the year will be "Wagons Westward," starring the now popular John Wayne.

Ferber-Kaufman Play.

The successful stage play of several seasons ago, "Minick," authored by Edna Ferber and George Kaufman, provides a screen vehicle for Fred Stone. Under the title of "No Place to Go" it comes to the Madison tomorrow for two days. It deals with the age old problem of relations between parents and children, in a humorous, homely way. The second film on the double feature is "Charlie Chan at Treasure Island." Sidney Toler, as the Oriental detective meets a murder mystery at the World's fair in San Francisco. Pauline Moore and Cesar Romero are in supporting roles.

Another Deanna?

Joe Pasternak, who has built Deanna Durbin into one of the "first class powers" of filmdom, has a new protege in Gloria Jean. He launches the 11-year-old singer in "The Under-Pup," which comes to the Ohio for two days, starting Wednesday. The story was originally published in Good Housekeeping. Gloria Jean, an attractive youngster with an exceptionally good voice plays Pip-Emma, a little girl from the East Side of New York City who wins a vacation at an exclusive girls camp. Romantic leads are in the hands of Nan Gray and Robert Cummings.

Power at Ritz.

Tyrone Power and his attractive new bride, Annabelle, are both on the Ritz bill the middle of the week, although not in the same picture. Power is starred with Alice Faye and Al Jolson in "Rose of Washington Square," the story of a famous blues singer who rose to fame by way of the Follies and who fell in love with, and married a charming rascal. Annabelle is co-starred with Robert Young in "Bridal Suite," a nonsensical romantic comedy laid in the Swiss Alps.

Historical Action.

The colorful page in American history which deals with the land-hungry pioneers who went into Oklahoma with the land rush and of the lawless towns that sprung up in the wake of settlers is told in "Oklahoma Kid," the James Cagney film at the Majestic. The Kid is the black sheep of a fine family and although he enters the picture as one of the bad men of the West, he remains to become a law enforcement officer. Rosemary Lane and Humphrey Bogart are supporting players. Preston Foster is a woman-hating editor and Lynn Bari a pretty reporter in "News Is Made at Night," the second Majestic feature.

Old Bailey.

Probably the most famous courtroom in the world is Old Bailey in London and the actual room is used as a background for the courtroom scenes in the English-made film "The Ware Case." A murder trial provides the climax of the play, which deals with a social problem. Clive Brook, who once was an American film star, plays the leading role. Also shown is another episode of the Blondie series, "Blondie Takes a Vacation."

Open Entertainment Festival

Phil Clark's Marching Men of Song, who were featured at the Dallas Exposition two years ago and who have been in concert since then, will be the opening number on the Entertainment Festival which is being sponsored by the Public Parks association. They will sing at First Congregational church Friday night, giving a concert in military uniforms. This is the first of four attractions on successive Friday nights. Season tickets for the four events are being sold by members of the Parks group.

SEES GERMANY NEARING STAGE OF REVOLUTION

Harvard Economist Who Spent Two Years in Naziland Says Hitler Critics Angry.

Editor's Note: This is the first of two articles presenting the views of Professor J. Anton de Haas of Harvard university, world-famous economist, on the international situation.

By DAVID W. CHUTE
(INS Staff Correspondent)

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—Germany, allied with a designing Russia, today may be standing on the brink of revolution, according to Professor J. Anton de Haas, of Harvard University.

He saw ahead:

Germany unable to stand a war of three years' duration because she has an insufficient supply of commodities, particularly vital oil, and has no way to get it elsewhere.

She may collapse internally, perhaps in as short a time as a year.

There is a distinct possibility that Russia, playing a game of Machiavellian diplomacy, and the allies, England and France, may be engaged in a race to determine whether a German revolution will be followed by a Communist or Conservative government.

Professor de Haas, world renowned economist and authority on international commercial relations, has spent part of the past two years in Germany.

He found Germany without an external financial structure and Czechoslovakia and Austria economic liabilities. Now Germany must feed the Poles.

Signs of Discontent.

Possessing intimate first hand knowledge of conditions within the reich, Professor de Haas declared there were, even before the war, mutterings of discontent among the people. The "old guard" of the German army is hostile to the Hitler policies. The Industrialists, who helped Hitler to power to escape Communism were bitter when he grabbed industrial control, and are even more bitter since his alliance with the Kremlin.

Russia, which has taken the only valuable parts of Poland, leaving Germany only a liability, might become the dominant power of western Europe by the mere expediency or organizing and supporting a Communistic revolution among the workers, declared the economist.

England and France, on the other hand, are hoping desperately that the German revolution, if and when it comes, may be organized by the old army and the industrialists and establish a conservative, capitalistic government, he said.

Two circumstances indicate this latter, according to Professor de Haas. First, the death of General Von Fritsch, a leader of the antagonistic old army, which, Professor de Haas declared, was "without a doubt" ordered by the German high command.

Second, is the otherwise inexplicable restraint of the British royal air force in refraining from bombing Essen and the entire Ruhr valley of Germany, the focal point of the German munitions and industrial workers which are extremely vulnerable to air attack. It is possible England hopes to encourage the favor of the industrialists by preserving their plants, he said.

"Germany has lost the war in the east," said Professor de Haas. "She may have won it from a military standpoint, but all she gained was an economic liability. The Poles must eat and Germany must feed them.

"In war time, Germany's greatest need is oil and gasoline to carry on major warfare, but where will she get it?

"Russia has it, to be sure. But in the first place, Russia would not give it to Germany for nothing. She would require consumers goods, railroad supplies, and industrial machinery in payment. How can Germany supply that with most of her men in the army? Even then, assuming she could, how could the oil be transported to Germany. Russia's oil deposits are near the Black sea and transportation would be difficult. She might transport it up the Danube, but on what? Germany has not the tank ships or railroad tank cars in which to carry it. Give her ten years and she could. But not today. And today is when she needs it."

BUYS TILE FOR STORM SEWERS

County Lets Contracts Totaling $2,200 to 3 Firms.

Contracts totaling $2,200 for furnishing materials for constructing the Lincoln Heights and Burns-Geddes storm sewers had been let today to three firms by the county commissioners.

An order for 100 feet of 15-inch tile and 2,100 feet of 10-inch tile went to Simon Small and Sons, Mansfield. The Universal Concrete Pipe company was awarded a contract for 2,400 feet of 12-inch tile, and the Treaty Foundry at Greenville got the order for 30 inlet grates.

The sewers, one in Lincoln Heights and the other opposite the Lumbermens Insurance company building northwest of the city, will be built under a WPA project at an estimated cost of $12,000.

Hill Problem Makes Yanks Fret on Series Eve

IN THE RUHL BOOK

By OSCAR RUHL,
News-Journal Sports Editor.

IN FINE fettle physically and spiritually, Cincinnati Reds today awaited the command to start firing against the baseball forces of the New York Yankees. . . . Undismayed by the long betting odds which give them only a 1 to 4 chance against McCarthy's champions of the American League, the Redlegs will not yield without efforts. "Deacon Bill" McKecknie, apparently, spoke the sentiments of his players when he said "I've never gone into anything in my life but that I expected to win."

Cincinnati will win or lose the World Series opening in Yankee Stadium Wednesday with Paul Derringer, Bucky Walters and Gene Thompson alternating in the box. . . . Derringer is definitely slated to toe the mound in the opener as Walters was eliminated as a potential series started when he toiled in Pittsburgh Sunday. . . . Walters will get the nod for the second game, according to present indications, with Thompson the choice for Saturday when the Reds and Yankees carry the series to Cincinnati after a day layoff.

Lefty Gomez, still in the hospital with a strained side, is definitely out of the series, it now appears. . . . With the Spaniard on the sidelines, Red Ruffing will probably twirl in the lid lifter, with Monte Pearson and Oral Hildebrand following in that order. . . . On paper, the Reds holds a decided pitching advantage with Gomez on the bench, but this may be offset by the Yankees' series experience . . . and if Ruffing is unable to go, as reports now say, it is doubtful who will get the call.

Series to Be Big Event for Redlegs.

ONE of the major items favoring the New York team will be poise on the ball field. . . . The World Series will be a big event for the Reds after a strenuous race in which they revealed attacks of defensive jitters, while to the Yankees it will be nothing more than another set of ball games.

Of course, there may be such a thing that the Yankees will go into the games over-confident. . . . The Reds, who are being told by the experts that they haven't a Chinaman's chance, have everything to gain and nothing to lose, so to speak. . . . So, they may rise to the occasion. . . . The Yankees are anxious to do what no other team has ever accomplished—win four straight World Series—and they may press in their attempt to knock another record for a loop.

Walters is given the best chance of any Cincinnati pitcher to trouble the New York gunners. . . . His sinker ball does tricks on the same order as Mel Harder's, and the Indian, you know, has always been troublesome for the Yankees. . . .

In analyzing Walters' victory chances, it must be kept in mind that there is a difference in officiating in the American and National leagues . . . National league arbitrators, if you regard the dope seriously, will give Walters a better chance to baffle the Yanks as it is an unwritten rule that they call strikes about six inches lower than the American umpires. . . . This may sound ridiculous, but it is a known fact that the arbitors of the two circuits are ruled by different regulations.

No Ducats Available For Cincinnati Tilts.

AND the Mansfield fans who still hold hopes of obtaining tickets for the Cincinnati end of the games might just as well give up. . . . Apparently, the only chance of buying tickets is if the Reds drop two games in New York. . . . If the Reds split or upset the dope and win a pair, the scalpers will offer the only source of tickets . . . and then the clamor for the pasteboards will probably exhaust the supply before Mansfield can reach the baseball-mad town.

It's Yankees, 2 to 1!

NEW YORK — (UP) — How United Press sports writers pick the world series:

George Kirksey—The Yankees to win within six games.

Harry Ferguson — Napoleon was a winner till Waterloo, and this one will be the Yanks' Waterloo. The Reds in six games.

Henry McLemore—The Yankees in five with Junior Thompson the only winning pitcher for Cincinnati.

Sophs on Hot Spot Saturday

Northwestern-Oklahoma Tilt Brings Together 'Kids.'

CHICAGO — (AP) — Two of the country's outstanding sophomore football players — whether they like it or not—will be squarely on the hot spot Saturday when Oklahoma and Northwestern clash at nearby Evanston.

The long-awaited debut of Northwestern's Bill De Correvont, most highly publicized prep player in football history, is set for this battle.

But there is more than a remote chance that he might have to take a back seat to another sophomore—Oklahoma's 185-pound Indian, Jack Jacobs, superb punter, passer and runner.

Young De Correvont, also a triple threater and prep sensation at Chicago's Austin high, has been looking better and better in recent workouts.

Jacobs was the outstanding figure in Oklahoma's 7-7 tie with Southern Methodist last week. Playing in his first college game, he took the opening kick-off for a 64-yard ride and later set up a touchdown with a 21-yard pass.

A crowd of 40,000 or more is expected to see the game, first for Northwestern, a team rated along with Michigan, Minnesota and Purdue in Big Ten predictions.

CALLAHAN JOINS BULLIES

COLUMBUS —(INS)— The Bullies, Columbus entrant in the American Professional Football league, today announced the acquisition of Bill Callahan, Nebraska quarterback. Callahan is the property of the Detroit Lions, who loaned him to Columbus for the balance of the season.

Tigers Remain On Top

Massillon Boasts 16 Straight Wins on Ohio Gridiron; Portsmouth Unbeaten.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Three major developments emerged today from Ohio's mud-covered high school gridirons, as the result of third-round games through which the scholastic brigade slipped and skidded over the week-end.

1. The onward surge of Massillon and Portsmouth, the Tigers beating Warren 33 to 0 for their 16th straight, and the Trojans knocking over Sprinfield's Wildcats 34 to 0 for their 18th without defeat.

2. The fall from the peak by Sandusky and Fostoria. The latter squad had copped 18 straight before falling, 13 to 0, before Lima South, while Sandusky, unbeaten in 16 games, bowed to Toledo Waite by 27 to 6. Greenfield McClain, winner of seven straight in 1938, was shunted aside by London, 9 to 6.

3. The scintillating individual performance of Hillis Hume, Alliance quarterback, who clung to the state scoring crown with a three-game total of 84 points. He counted three touchdowns against Grove City, Pa., as the Aviators won 26 to 0, running his touchdown total to 14.

Hume's ball-carrying was not the only bit of hefty work placed on display, however. Bob Warden, substitute Portsmouth halfback, counted three touchdowns against Springfield on runs of 46, 42 and 26 yards; Charley Dixon, 145-pound half, contributed four touchdowns to Jackson's 44-0 win over New Boston; Bob Fuller of Canton Lehman scored three touchdowns and an extra point as his team shut out Parma 33 to 0, and Bob Hecklinger of Toledo Waite wrecked Sandusky's record single-handed with a three-touchdown splurge.

Up at Lorain 6,500 fans sat through a rainstorm as Lorain and New Philadelphia battled to a 7-7 deadlock, but the same storm halted play after six minutes of the third period at Newark as that club lost to Chillicothe by 21 to 0. The rain caused bulbs in the lighting system to break and the coaches called a halt to prevent injury to the boys. Edward Nerneise, 15, suffered a fractured leg on the first kickoff of the game between his Marion St. Mary's team and Forest, but his mates won 6 to 0.

Portsmouth Central Catholic, loser of one of 11 games last year, beat Sciotoville 26 to 6 for its third straight of the present campaign. Zanesville beat Marietta, 14 to 6, for its first victory over the Pioneers since 1925, but Bob Williamson, 145-pound junior halfback, completed 14 of 18 passes, including a 19-yarder, for the lone Pioneer touchdown—probably the most remarkable bit of schoolboy aerial work in the state's history.

Steubenville Wells tossed only two passes against Columbus Central, but tacked the two Johnny Stojack-to-Bernie Cybulski heaves together for 61 yards and the touchdown that won 6 to 0. Steubenville meets that tough Portsmouth team this week-end.

Dick McGillivray, East Liverpool fullback, scored all 19 points as Akron West was beaten 19-13, while at Akron the old "sleeper pass" play was dusted off. Akron Buchtel, beaten 22 and tied three times in 25 city series games, used the "sleeper" in the closing minutes to beat Akron Central 7 to 0, the first game ever won in the city title chase by Buchtel.

Coach Carl Spessard of Ravenna is moaning. His team has dropped three games by a total of four points. The opener went to Shaker Heights by 13-12, and the second to Akron Buchtel 20-19. Against Salem his punter backed out of the end zone on an attempted kick, and the automatic safety beat him 2 to 0.

Down in Ross county, Frankfort beat Clarksburg 16 to 0, the losers winding up with a net loss of six yards. Washington Courthouse beat Waverly 26 to 7. Dayton Fairmont, winner of three straight, the latest a 19-7 conquest of Sidney, is tipped as the new champion of the Miami Valley league. Lancaster's Golden Gales beat Circleville 51 to 0, but face a tougher chore this week against Coshocton in the Central Ohio loop opener.

Crestline, winner of three, nominates Bob Frye as runner-up for scoring honors. He has 56 for the season, 10 ahead of Belleville's Howard Hamilton.

"Tippy" Dye's Grandview squad copped its third straight, over Wilmington by 25 to 9, the losers being unable to halt the passing and running of George Mingle, backfield member of the 1938 Associated Press all-Ohio squad, who scored two of the markers and played a leading role in the march of the others.

Derringer's All Set for Chance To Redeem 1931 Series Failure

By DILLON GRAHAM
A-P Sports Writer

BIG Paul Derringer, Cincinnati's Old Man Control, has been waiting eight long years to redeem himself in world series competition.

Back in 1931 Derringer, then a rookie sensation with the St. Louis Cardinals, was tossed against the Philadelphia A's in the opening game of the fall classic.

The bulky righthander had won 18 games and lost only eight. Skipper Gabby Street elected to gamble with his freshman ace ahead of the veteran Burleigh Grimes and Bill Hallahan.

Derringer wasn't ready for such stiff competition.

He lost the first game to Lefty Grove, 6-2. And when Street threw him back in against the A's in the 6th game, Grove beat him again, 8-1. The kid just didn't have the experience and polish. And, although no pitcher has better control now, it was his wildness as much as anything else that brought his downfall in that series.

Paul was soon traded to Cincinnati, where he languished with the tail-enders. But he's always hoped for another chance — and now he has it. He's likely to be Manager Bill McKechnie's ace card as the Reds tackle the Yankees.

Derringer, who stands 6 feet 3½ inches and weighs 205 pounds, will be the biggest man in the series. McKechnie and Al Simmons are the only other Reds who've had series experience.

Although Paul has never before won league pitching honors, he has been recognized for several years as perhaps the top pitcher of the loop. This is the third season in which he has won more than 20 games. He copped 22 in 1935 for a sixth-place club and 21 a year ago. This has been his best season. He won 25 and lost seven.

Derringer never gets ruffled on the hill now, no matter how dark the situation. He pitches easily and seemingly without effort. "It looks as though he's pitching in a rocking chair," says Coach Jimmy Wilson.

Some idea of Paul's control is found in a comparison with Bob Feller. Last season Feller gave 208 bases on balls. Derringer gave 49. During one stretch this season Paul went 49 innings without allowing a base on balls.

"He has one of the finest curve balls in the majors, plenty of speed, perfect control and a world of moxie," says Catcher Ernie Lombardi.

"He appears just as cool in a jam as when the bases are empty and this attitude of indifference to worry is reflected in his mates behind him. They have supreme confidence in him," explains Wilson.

DERRINGER . . . McKechnie's ace card?

Sore Arm May Bench Ruffing

Pearson Likely to Get Starting Assignment If "Red's" Unable to Toil.

By JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK—(AP)—A pitching problem, of all things, had the New York Yankee masterminds fretting today as the world champions and the Cincinnati Reds rehearsed for tomorrow's opening act of the 1939 world series.

Charles (Rufus the Red) Ruffing, rugged righthander who started the first game of the series last year and also opened the all-star game for the American league in July, had an arm ailment. He vowed he was ready to work, but up until the Yankees straggled onto the soggy turf of Yankee stadium for practice today Manager Joe McCarthy had not decided whether to lead with his ace.

Ruffing has not thrown a business ball since the middle of September, when the last place St. Louis Browns chiselled 13 hits off him in less than nine innings. Ruffing has made at least one recent trip to a muscle specialist in Brooklyn and may or may not have reached the physical fitness he proclaimed.

* * *

If the Yankee skipper should decide to hold back Ruffing, he undoubtedly would open with Monte Marcellus Pearson, the chunky Californian who won one game in each of the last three world series for the Yanks.

Pearson's record of 12 victories and five defeats was dwarfed beside Ruffing's 21 and seven, but he finished strong.

Lefty Gomez, just out of a hospital and still taped on the back and side where he strained a muscle, did not rate consideration for the first two games, and his appearance at any time during the series was in doubt.

The Reds arranged to follow the Yankees onto the stadium field this afternoon for a final workout. Manager Will McKechnie already had settled on Paul Derringer to hurl the first game for the National league champions.

Bucky Walters, the converted infielder who combined with Derringer to win 52 games during the season was certain of the second game assignment. These two and Gene (Junior) Thompson, 22-year-old rookie who finished the season with two successive shut-outs, were also the choices to work the two or three games that will be played in Cincinnati starting Saturday.

Contrary to last year when the Chicago Cubs did some last-minute revising, both foes were set on the same lineups that were in regular usage at the end of the season.

Strategists pointed out the threatened absence of Gomez might not be as serious as it seemed, because only two of the Cincinnati Reds, Ival Goodman and Lonnie Frey, are lefthanded batters.

Nevertheless, the uncertainty surrounding the Yankee pitching caused bookmakers to shift their odds slightly. They cut the three-time champions from a 2 against 17 proposition to 5 against 16, and on the Reds were laying 13 to 5 instead of 14 to 5, which they gave yesterday.

Garcia Kayoes Apostoli to Annex Crown

Referee Stops Fight After Third Knockdown in 7th; Loser Quits Division.

By HYPE IGOE

NEW YORK—(INS)—Fred Apostoli, "boloed' off his middleweight throne by the Filipino, Ceferino Garcia, today renounced the 160-pound division and declared that he never again would attempt to fight at that weight.

* * *

Utterly crushed by the seventh-round knockout at the hands of the blazing-eyed son of a Manila sugar cane cutter, the former bell-hop said that in the future he must cast his luck with the light heavyweights. Larry White, his manager, backed up the statement.

When Apostoli had to drill 20 minutes to take off a hateful half pound in order to make the title mark of 160 pounds, it was plain then that Apostoli was making his last stand as a middleweight.

Garcia brought Apostoli down three times in the seventh and last round in Madison Square Garden and Fred took counts of "2," "9" and after "2" had been tolled in his third crash to the canvas, Billy Cavanaugh mercifully stopped the bout.

The end really began to loom up in the sixth. Apostoli was landing but apparently he didn't hurt Garcia who was astonishingly strong at 153¾ pounds. When Garcia landed he hurt Apostoli.

Almost before he could take his fighting stance in the seventh, Apostoli was adrift in mid-ocean in a butter tub. The Philippine boy, his raven hair sticking out like the quills on a porcupine, seemed like a demon possessed.

He ripped uppercuts with deadly effectiveness to Apostoli's chin and body. He was like a windmill torn loose from its mooring. Rights and lefts, rights and lefts, lefts and rights fairly showered on Apostoli's chin, head and body.

* * *

The bout drew $35,433.83, the paid attendance being 11,465.

Tough Tasks Faced By Tygers, County Football Elevens

HIGH school football aggregations of Mansfield and vicinity returned to the practice fields yesterday to prepare for tough assignments.

Few "breathers" are on schedule this week-end as the season hits the fourth week of play.

Mansfield's Tygers face one of the tougher foes remaining on their schedule Saturday when the invade New Philadelphia, which proved class last Saturday when it held the vaunted Lorain club to a 7 to 7 tie.

The Tygers came out of the Cambridge tilt without a sign of injury, and Coach Paul Snyder expects to have his charges in tip-top shape for the New Philly affair.

Madison also survived the Crestline tilt, which it dropped 31 to 0, without serious hurts, and Coach Al Fendrick indicated a complete shake-up was in the offing as he spent considerable time with reserves in yesterday's workout.

The Rams encounter Orrville, the third Class A team on their schedule, here Friday night, and victory prospects are not encouraging for Madison. Orville is undefeated.

Bellville, boasting three straight victories, plays at Loudonville Thursday afternoon instead of Friday due to a teachers' convention and the Blue Jays stack up as favorites.

Butler, the county's other Class B team, plays the Mt. Vernon Reserves, and anything but an easy assignment confronts the Bulldogs, who showed considerable improvement in their defeat by Mt. Gilead.

Two N. C. O. conference games are on schedule this week, with Shelby playing at Bucyrus Friday and Ashland tangling with Marion. For reasons unexplained, the site and date of the Ashland-Marion game have not been announced. Galion is host to Carey and Mt. Vernon is not scheduled.

Crestline, a miniature edition of Massillon's great team, will seek its fourth triumph on its home field Friday when Fremont St. Joseph's invades. New London performs at Amherst and Fredericktown plays at Centerburg.

Reds Given Best Chance of Any Yankee Foe In Four Years to Win World Series.

By LAWTON CARVER

NEW YORK—(INS)—Admittedly at their peak in recent games for the first time since July, the confident, hustling Cincinnati Reds hereby are given the best chance of any team in the last four years to stall the New York Yankees and win the world series, for, seemingly, the Yanks are going to start with uncertain pitching.

Lefty Gomez apparently is definitely out of it and disquieting reports today had it that Red Ruffing may be held over until the second game. In that case, Monte Pearson, Oral Hildebrand or some innocent bystander would get the call to oppose Paul Derringer in the opener tomorrow.

The baseball people are not above planting propaganda that will best serve their ends, but nobody around here is doubting that Gomez is out of it and Ruffing a potential early casualty. Gomez unreasonably picked the week before the series to get himself laid up with a pulled side muscle, while Ruffing has had the mfseries in his right arm ever since mid-September.

In contrast to all the confusion we are experiencing in what we laughingly call our camp, the Reds can be seen sitting around the lobby of their hotel as composed as though they were going into a June game with the Philadelphia Phillies. They've got Derringer for the opener and Bucky Walters and Gene Thompson for the second and third games. That's good enough for them. Their pitchers are at least reasonably healthy.

* * *

Aside from their pitchers, the Yankees were pronounced by Trainer Earl Painter in as nearly perfect shape as he has ever seen them. That would be reassuring, but for the fact that pitching could decide the series—and probably will.

Injury to Put Maag on Beach For Inaugural

Ohio State to Start Missouri Game With Sophomores at Tackle Posts.

COLUMBUS — (U.P.) — The Ohio State football gladiators buckled down to their final week of practice before game time in a glum and grim mood today after two pieces of bad news reached the Buck camp.

First came Trainer Tucker Smith with sad tidings that Charley Maag, converted center counted upon as starting right tackle, would be out of the opening battle with Missouri. An ankle sprain received in scrimmage last Friday developed more seriously than expected and the Sandusky giant will be sidelined for at least a week.

* * *

His absence means that Coach Francis Schmidt will have to rely almost entirely upon untested sophomore material to man the vital tackle posts. Jim Daniell, a 219-pound yearling, already was groomed for the left tackle job and Jim Piccinini, a 240-pounder from Cleveland, will move into Maag's spot. Leonard Thom, Sandusky, and Thornton Dixon, Toledo, both sophomores, are the first line of reserve strength.

The second piece of bad news was conveyed by Schmidt himself after scouting Missouri's Tigers in their 30 to 0 swamping of Colorado.

"We knew they had a good passing attack but we didn't expect to find such a strong running game and big players," Schmidt declared. "They gained 17 first downs on running plays while holding Colorado to 2."

While Paul Christman, star halfback, is as good as advertised, Schmidt had generous praise for Jim Starmer, the right halfback and two brothers, Buddy and Bob Orf, pass receivers.

* * *

Taking into account the Buck's own passing talent which Schmidt calls "the best since I've been here," Saturday afternoon may see a wide-open aerial battle in Ohio stadium.

ARMY, NAVY SIGN

PHILADELPHIA—(U.P.) — Contracts were renewed today for the Army-Navy football game to be played here for the next three years.

Hartnett Thinks Reds Have Chance in Series.

CHICAGO —(INS)— Manager Gabby Hartnett of the 1938 National League champions, the Chicago Cubs, is not among those who feel the coming World series is in the bag for the Yankees. Hartnett, whose own club was batted out of last year's series in four straight games by the New Yorkers, said today:

"Why shouldn't the Reds have a chance? We lost every game to the Yankees last fall, but in every one of them we had as good a chance to win as they did, and let it slip away. I know the Reds of this year are a lot stronger than the club we had against the Yankees. And outside of the strength Charley Keller may have added to the Yankees, I can't imagine they are any better now than they were last fall. Maybe they're not as good if it's true that Lefty Gomez' arm is bothering him."

Women Hold Golf Banquet Wednesday

Some 30 players and sponsors are expected to attend the affair at which Harriett Roth will act as toast mistress. Jane Williams of The News-Journal editorial staff, will present individual trophies to the members of the championship Guiher Grocery foursome. The Grocery team edged the Liberty Shoes by a point to annex the title.

Marble, Bromwich Win Singles Titles

LOS ANGELES — (INS) — Jack Bromwich, the two-handed tennis star from Australia, and Alice Marble, Wimbledon and United States champion, today held the men's singles and women's singles crowns, respectively, of the 1939 Pacific Southwest tennis tournament.

Bromwich gave a masterful exhibition in subduing the stocky Franjo Puncec of Yugoslavia, 4-6, 6-0, 6-3, 6-4, while Miss Marble completed her most successful competitive season by dethroning Dorothy Bundy, of Santa Monica, the defending champion, in the women's singles finals, 9-7, 6-1. In another stirring final, Adrian Quist and Bromwich captured the men's doubles title by defeating their cup teammates, Jack Crawford and Harry Hopman, 4-6, 2-6, 6-1, 6-0, 6-4.

ROCHESTER SQUARES SERIES AT LOUISVILLE

LOUISVILLE, Ky. —(AP)— After being held to 14 hits in the first three games, Rochester, International league batting champion, had a field day last night, bombing six Louisville pitchers for 20 hits to win, 13 to 3, and square the little world series at two games apiece.

Louisville, which finished next to last in team batting in the American association, made 10 hits but tight pitching in the pinches by Mike Ryba and John Grodzicki and smart fielding by Harry Davis and Marty Marion pinched off most of the scoring chances.

Michaels, Liederkranz Club Set Scoring Pace In Club League With Counts of 637, 2730.

HENRY MICHAELS and the Liederkranz club annexed scoring honors in the Club Handicap league at the Meder alleys last night with respective totals of 637 and 2730. The Liederkranz club, however, won only one game from the American Legion.

Art Hilborn pasted up a 623 as the Optimist club came through with a 2676 series and a pair of wins over the Schoolmasters. The other 600 roller was Paul Christman of the Page Dairys, who upset 609 sticks as his team dropped two decisions to Tracy & Avery, and Pete Linster of the Richman Clothes, who knocked out a 617 and led his teammates to a sweep over the Commercial Managers.

The three defeats knocked the Commercial Managers out of first place and permitted the Kiwanis club, which blanked the Mansfield Savings Bank, to replace them.

TRADERS MOVE CAUTIOUSLY IN HIGHER MARKET

Steels, Aircrafts and Farm Shares Enjoy Most Favor; Selling Dries Up.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Stock market prices climbed a bit today after yesterday's reaction and leaders added fractions to around a point.

Higher were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, International Harvester, Caterpillar, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Sperry, Westinghouse Electric, Southern Railway, Allied Chemical and Sears Roebuck. Backward were du Pont and Union Carbide.

Brokers said the profit taking which was evident yesterday had apparently dried up. Traders, however, were cautious pending full study of Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement in the house of commons today and Reichsfuehrer Hitler's speech, expected later in the week.

Steels, aircrafts and farm implement shares seemed to enjoy the most favor. Rails and utilities were inactive.

Observers noted that the first war month, September, saw the greatest domestic sales of copper on record. A total of 183,627 tons changed hands compared with the previous peak of 183,151 tons in July.

'Feud' Lands Two Families In Court, 8 Children Testify

Parents of two families were reprimanded for their conduct before their children in municipal court this morning as they aired a neighborhood quarrel of long standing before Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch.

The reprimand was administered during an assault and battery hearing in which Edmund T. Pelasky, Sixth avenue, was accused of striking the 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Trumpower, Grace street, following a quarrel between the Trumpower and Pelasky youths yesterday.

After eight children ranging from six to 12 years of age had testified in the case, parents of the children accused one another of causing trouble between the youngsters.

After being called to order twice by the court for what the judge termed a "display of conduct," the parents were criticized for "dragging your children in here."

"You can't expect much from these children when you set an example such as this," Judge Kalbfleisch said.

Pelasky was placed on probation for three years with the warning that he should not try to "play policeman."

Pelasky claimed he did not strike the boy but that the youth had stumbled and fell when he chased him.

BRITAIN SPURNS VEILED THREATS OF NAZIS, REDS

Premier Says 'Offers' Will Be Considered, Mindful of 'Broken Promises.'

celved and carried out this policy of successive aggression and it can neither be evaded nor excused," he said.

As he spoke, Premier Mussolini and his cabinet in Rome were receiving from Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano what was presumed here to be an outline of Germany's plan for a quick peace.

Coincidentally the arrival in London of a Turkish military mission and British attentiveness to Spain showed the intensity of the diplomatic struggle over Europe's neutrals.

Labor and liberal leaders concurred with Chamberlain. Laborite Clement Attlee said "We must examine every kind of a proposal for peace, but we must deal with realities, and it is no good saying there is peace when there is no peace.

"A mere reversion of the situation of the last year or so would not bring the world back to peace."

Liberal Leader Sir Archibald Sinclair said: "So long as Germany is governed by Hitler and the people who surround him, we will constantly be confronted with a choice between submission to his will and the dread of alternative war.

"This country wants peace, but it is not prepared to buy it at the price of freedom and the moral values of civilization."

Chamberlain said that a passage in the Soviet-German declaration, which mentioned an alternative of Nazi-Communist "consultation" if hostilities continue, "seems to convey the suggestion of some proposal for peace with a scarcely veiled threat as the consequences if the proposal should be refused."

He was referring directly to the Russian-German agreement on Poland and the accompanying declaration making a peace gesture with the alternative of Russian-German "consultations" in the event that Britain and France refused the bid.

This passage in the Moscow declaration Chamberlain asserted "seems to convey the suggestion of some proposal for peace with a scarcely veiled threat as to the consequences if the proposal should be refused."

"I cannot anticipate what the nature of any such proposal might be," Chamberlain said.

"But no mere assurance from the German government could be accepted by us.

"Nobody desires the war to continue for one unnecessary day, but the overwhelming mass of opinion in this country and France is determined to secure that the rule of violence shall cease and that the words of the government—once pledged — must henceforth be kept."

No Reason to Back Up.

"I see nothing in what has happened that should lead this country to modify the attitude which it has felt it right to take. There is nothing in the agreement between Germany and Russia that should cause us to do anything other than what we are doing now," said the prime minister.

The prime minister said the Soviet-German agreement had changed the position of Poland, "but it by no means follows that the arrangement will endure to the ultimate advantage of Germany, and still less should it affect the aims of his majesty's government."

The invasion of Poland he said was not the "fundamental" cause of the war.

"That cause was the overwhelming sense in this country and in France of the intolerable nature of a state of affairs in which the nations of Europe were faced with the alternative of jeopardizing their freedom or of mobilizing their forces at regular intervals to defend it."

He reiterated that Britain's war aim was to "put to an end the successive acts of German aggression which have menaced the freedom and very security of all the nations of Europe."

Youth Accused of Burglary After He Admits Breaking, Entering

Martin Xander, 23, of R. D. 5, Mansfield, was held today in the county jail on a breaking and entering charge involving the burglarizing of the Zimmerman grocery in Roseland last July.

Xander was arrested several days ago on his return from Virginia, but authorities waited until he admitted breaking into the store before filing the charge.

He confessed entering the store and taking about 50 in small change from the cash drawer. He left the city immediately and was arrested when he came back to the store last week and was recognized by Herbert Zimmerman, proprietor.

SHELBY PHONE PLANS APPROVED

The Shelby Telephone company has been authorized by the state utilities commission to issue 4,000 shares of no par common stock, at $25 each, in exchange for 1,000 shares of $100 par common, and to issue $100,000 in first mortgage 30-year bonds, bearing 5½ per cent interest, dated July 1, 1939, the Associated Press reported in dispatches from Columbus today.

INCREASE 1940 SHELBY BUDGET

Commissioners Okay $52,300 for Operating Expenses, $15,500 for Bonds.

SHELBY — An increase of $2,300 over the 1939 figures for the general operating expenses for the city of Shelby was certified by county commissioners for 1940, council was notified at its regular meeting last night.

The commissioners approved a budget of $52,300 for 1940, although council had asked for $66,900. A sum of $15,000, the amount asked, was certified for bond retirement. This is an increase of $2,900 over 1939.

Councilman Kenneth Rothlisberger, who "quit" council at the last meeting after he had protested the appointment of a junior fireman to the Shelby fire department, was present at the meeting last night.

Resolutions were passed appropriating $3,000 from the general operating fund to other special funds. For poor relief $2,000 was appropriated so that the city could match state funds to get the sate's aid. Another $1,000 was appropriated for the city-wide NYA program for the improvement of the playgrounds and parks. This will provide for the city's share of the project as its sponsor.

A deed to a lot on South Gamble street near the W. W. Skiles athletic field was accepted from the Ohio Seamless Tube company by the council. If the proposed street from Central avenue to South Gamble street is constructed, the lot will be part of the street.

SEEKS DAMAGES

Farmer Tells Council Stock Lost Through Pollution.

SHELBY—City officials today were faced with the problem of providing adequate sewage disposal facilities for industrial wastes in this city. At least five companies in the city use acids in their plants that either get into the sanitary sewer system or the Black Fork river.

The condition of the Black Fork river, north of Shelby, near the city sewer farm, was called to the attention of city officials last night at the regular city council meeting by Ira Snyder, a farmer.

Saying that he felt that the city owed him some remuneration, Snyder told the council that he had lost about 14 sheep, a horse and a large amount of milk because of the pollution of the river by acids and other greasy substances that make the water unfit for animals to drink. The milk had been sent back from dairies because of the peculiar odor that the water gave the milk from cows that had been drinking from the river.

CALLS HEADS OF STATE PRISONS

Sherwood Sets Meeting for Tomorrow to Study Federal Classification System.

Arthur L. Glattke, superintendent of the Ohio State reformatory will go to Columbus tomorrow to attend a meeting of Ohio prison heads with State Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood and Assistant Director Herbert Mooney to study the Chillicothe federal reformatory classification system.

The meeting has been called by Sherwood for the purpose of planning "more effective rehabilitation of criminals" through creation of classification committees" at each penal institution, Associated Press dispatches from Columbus said.

"The institution committees, composed of staff members, will be set up as soon as possible," Sherwood declared. "By intelligent placing of inmates either in schools or work for which they are suited and adapted, we hope to improve penal treatment and adjustment, and hasten the rehabilitation of a larger number of inmates."

Sherwood said he also would confer tomorrow with officials of the Federal Veterans' hospital at Chillicothe regarding possible transfer of eligible patients to the institution from state hospitals.

MERCURY FLIRTS WITH FREEZING

33-Degree Weather Brings Frost Again; Warmer Forecast.

The frosty weather is due to leave Wednesday, but it will go slowly, the weatherman said today.

After two consecutive mornings of 33-degree readings, one above freezing, the mercury will rise tomorrow under clear skies, the forecast said.

There was another heavy frost this morning which, with yesterday's frost, killed most of the vegetation. By noon today, however, the temperature had climbed to 64, one degree under yesterday's high. The average reading for the past 24 hours was 48 as compared with the normal 58.

WARNS FARMERS OF 'HYSTERIA'

AAA Administrator Says Plowing Up of Grassland Would be Costly.

MINNEAPOLIS—(AP)—A warning against "war hysteria" among farmers that could lead to "costly" plowing up of grasslands was made today by R. M. Evans, administrator of the Agricultural Adjustment administration.

In an address prepared for delivery before the Grain and Feed Dealers national association, Evans declared:

"I am thoroughly convinced that the ultimate solution of the agricultural problem in the United States is going to be the establishment of the proper balance between the acreages of our grass and tilled crops. * * * If war hysteria leads to the plowing-up of grasslands it will be costly." . . .

Soviet Rushes 'Aid' Treaties With Latvia, Lithuania

RUSSIA HOPES TO DOMINATE INNER BALTIC

Speeds Negotiations to Keep Germany From Area Soviet Regards as Hers.

(By United Press)

MOSCOW—Russia, bidding for domination of the entire inner Baltic, expects to conclude this week "mutual aid" treaties which will bring Latvia and Lithuania under its "protection" and crowd Germany out of a sphere she always regarded as safely hers, it was understood today.

At the same time it was reported that Russia had encountered an obstacle in its negotiations with Turkey.

Diplomatic quarters heard that Russia had presented Sukru Saracoglu, Turkish foreign minister who is now here, with a draft pact of mutual assistance which Saracoglu has forwarded to his government for its comments. It was reported that the Russian draft might interfere with Turkish obligations to Great Britain and France.

But all went well on the Baltic, so far as Russia was concerned.

Wilhelm Munters, Latvian foreign minister who arrived yesterday, was given a two-hour conference with Josef Stalin, Premier-Foreign Commissar Viacheslav Molotov and Under Foreign Commissar Vladimir Potemking, to hear Russia's requirements.

Russia was understood to want special port facilities at Libau, Latvia, and the use of Libau and perhaps other harbors for the Russian navy.

Both Latvia and Lithuania, whose foreign minister, Juozas Urbsys, is to fly here today, were expected to accept from Russia "mutual aid" treaties along the lines of Russia's treaty with Estonia.

With special facilities at Libau, Russia will have penetrated, since it invaded Poland Sept. 17, 500 miles out into the Baltic from Leningrad, and will have extended its sphere of influence to within 55 miles of German Memel and 320 miles of the western entrance to the Baltic without firing a shot.

Diplomatic quarters reported that Russia had presented Turkish Minister Saracoglu with important proposals — diplomats called them demands—Sunday.

Russia was reported to be seeking not only to ensure neutralization of the Turkish Dardanelles strait between the Black and Mediterranean seas but possibly to be seeking a share in the strait's control.

Predicts China Will 'Wear Out' Japs In Long War

China will fight it out with Japan whether it takes five years or 20 years and China will not be conquered, Paul Dietz, Shanghai representative of the Goodrich Tire and Rubber company, told the Rotary club at its luncheon meeting today at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Giving the Rotarians a first-hand view of the Far East situation, Dietz predicted that China's manpower and natural resources will enable it to "wear out" Japan and win the prolonged war.

"The only help China wants from the United States is our promise to quit selling Japan munitions and arms to enable the Japanese to continue their attacks on China," Dietz said.

Dietz, who has spent much time in China in recent years, traced the story of Japan's conquest of China back several years, adding that Japan's desire to be the lone power in the East and to keep western nations out was the only reason for the present struggle.

Atty. W. M. Weldon was program chairman for the meeting. C. G. Hillier, vice president, was in charge in the absence of G. J. Kochenderfer, president, who is on vacation.

BRITAIN TURNS NAVAL FORCES ON SEA RAIDERS

Chamberlain Tells Commons Nation Taking New Steps Against 'Menace.'

(By United Press)

LONDON — Great Britain is dealing energetically with the "fresh menace" of German sea raiders in the south Atlantic, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain told the house of commons today as the vast power of the British navy was turned to search for the vessel that sank the British steamer Clement off Brazil.

"Evidence has been received that a German raider is operating in the south Atlantic," the prime minister said in asserting that the Germans were threatening to "pursue an unrestricted submarine campaign."

"This fresh menace will be dealt with according to prearranged plans."

The prime minister gave no hint of the pre-arranged plans of the admiralty to hunt down German sea raiders such as operated during the World war.

Germany's U-boat warfare, he said, has resulted so far in the sinking of seven neutral ships in addition to other neutral vessels sunk by mines or bombing.

The prime minister then referred to a broadcast from Germany asserting that the Nazis would regard every British merchantman as a warship if it carried guns for protection against U-boat attacks. That would mean sinking vessels without warning.

"If this means anything," he said, "it means that she (Germany) is to pursue an unrestricted submarine campaign."

There is ample evidence that U-boats are still operating around the British coasts, Chamberlain said, but the navy is preventing them from sinking vessels and driving them "to distant waters."

He said that between Sept. 11 and Sept. 20, a total of 1,485 vessels totaling 3,679,000 tons, had entered or cleared from United Kingdom ports. In the same period, he said, only 1.25 per cent of this number or 1.75 per cent of the tonnage involved had been lost to the U-boats.

Heads 40 and 8

The 40 and 8 of McVey Post, American Legion, elected M. Earl Saltzgaber (above) to succeed Herbert Gibbs as chef de guerre at their annual election last night. Other officers chosen are E. C. Fuller, chef de train; Fred Roth, commisaire intendent; F Thane Shaw, correspondent, A. F. Conroy, conducteur; H. B. Emmer, grade de la Porte, Myron H. Smith, lampiste; and Arthur Busch, William J. Shnug and Gibbs, as cheminots. The new officers will be installed Nov. 6.

POLITICAL PARTY ACTIVITY SPURS REGISTRATONS

Hundreds Qualify for November Election With Deadline Only 6 Days Away.

Spurred by the activity of political party workers, hundreds of Mansfielders have registered or transferred in the past week to be eligible to vote next month, election board clerks said today.

Before the deadline next Monday night, a new high in city registrations may be reached. The peak was approximately 19,500 last year. Since then, however, more than 4,000 names have been ruled ineligible.

Republican and Democratic central committeemen are concentrating on getting a large registration to boost the size of the prospective vote.

G. O. P. Workers Rally.

Republican committeemen in the fourth, fifth and sixth wards held a "pep" meeting last night at G. O. P. headquarters before starting their drive for registrations.

Registration is required of persons who have failed to vote at two consecutive general elections, those who have reached voting age since the last election or will before the next one, new residents in the city and women who have married since the last election.

The election board office in the basement of the courthouse will be open until 8:30 p. m. Friday, Saturday and Monday to receive registrations and transfers, A. F. Porter, board clerk, said today. Until Friday, the office will close at 4 p. m. daily.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 3, 1939.

Then, again, there are as many degrees of neutrality as there are belligerency.

The Detroit News assumes that Ohio's three million acres of timber, as revealed by a recent survey, does not include presidential.

Sentiment in Washington is said to favor limiting all incomes to $10,000 a year if we get into the war. That's one way to keep us out of war, too.

A Great Churchman Passes

RISING from a humble family of poor immigrants, George Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago became one of the nation's most distinguished religious leaders.

And when death claimed him yesterday it brought to a close an unusual career of 44 years as a churchman that was marked not only by his talented leadership but by his humanitarianism.

A great builder, Cardinal Mundelein developed his archdiocese into one of the largest in the world. He demonstrated his business genius on more than one occasion. He organized the charitable institutions into one group that now collects and dispenses from $500,000 to $1,000,000 annually.

A "big brother" group he founded provides assistance to Catholic boys involved with the law.

A remark that was characteristic of the man was the time he was broached with plans for a magnificent new cathedral for Chicago:

"I would rather uplift the poor and despairing to a better and happier life than rear the greatest cathedral in the world," he said.

Both the Catholic church and the nation as a whole has lost an outstanding churchman and humanitarian in his passing.

Truly "Groaning Board"

THE MENU at Father Divine's 24-hour banquet in New York City a short time ago read more like the contents of a comprehensive cook book than a list of foods for one dinner. Large numbers of followers who did not sit at the banquet table ate outside under the trees or at booths in the large hall of the Harlem "palace." They had plenty of food and could buy a snack or a full meal for a penny to 15 cents.

Inside, at a long U-shaped table, the 300 guests had a chance to eat or drink an amazing variety of foods and beverages. Hot drinks included tea, coffee, hot water, hot postum and hot cocoa. Cold drinks, of which there were seven, began with water. There were 45 vegetables, 56 meats —running from bologna and "hashlet stew" to roast turkey. There were 17 kinds of bread, seven sauces, fourteen relishes, ten salads, six jams and 24 desserts. Cheeses and crackers and toothpicks were also available.

Reports of that staggering feast impress even a normally well-fed American. What must the real thing have been to the hundreds there, many of whom doubtless have known some pretty slim meals at one time or another? And how would it look to a rationed German? Truly America is a rich land.

Boost For Education

DICTATORS, in the opinion of President Robert M. Hutchins of Chicago university, have inadvertently accomplished one good thing for Americans. They have helped our education. Shocked by the suppression of academic freedom in totalitarian countries, we have rallied to its defense in our own universities, colleges and public schools.

Furthermore, many of the leaders in thought and education who have been exiled from their native lands because of their intellectual independence have found new opportunity to teach and speak here. At the University of Chicago, says Dr. Hutchins, "hardly a department from art to zoology has failed to benefit from the determined ignorance of the totalitarian regimes."

In another way, too, they have served this cause. They have set many Americans to studying history and government and racial cultures. The result will be a better understanding not only of current affairs but of the development of civilization and the part an intelligent nation can take in its further advance.

Pork Allies

"PIGS is pigs," as the old story goes, but pigs are also good soldiers. Demonstration of this fact is perhaps the most novel contribution made so far in the present European war.

The French troops forcing their way toward Germany's West Wall along the Moselle river are said to be using thousands of them. Before an assault they send out an advance wave of pigs to clean up the mined areas. Browsing and rooting, the animals touch off mines. They are blown to bits, but leave the ground reasonably "clean." Then the troops advance and occupy the terrain.

It is a clever bit of strategy, and might win the war if the pigs held out. And it must annoy hungry Germans, to see all that good pork wasted. The very use of hogs in such a way, when people are already on' such a small allowance of fats, emphasizes the economic inferiority of the Germans.

Circus Mobilized

IT IS STILL POSSIBLE, amid all the hard toil and fighting and growing disillusionment of the German people, to get a smile out of that country. Many a farm and factory toiler must grin as he learns that the circus animals at Hamburg are being put to work. Camels and elephants and zebras, it is reported, will replace trucks and tractors on German farms, to release mechanized equipment for the army.

So "Heinie" turns mahout and learns to gee, whoa and haw the elephant. That may not be so hard, because circus elephants are well trained. But how do you hitch up a giraffe, and what do you say to him, and how is he rounded up when he runs away?

So it's to be the Cincinnati Reds against the New York Yankees, and for a few October days the scoreboards may oust Europe from America's attention.

"What we need," says a friend, "is a good scandal, to take our minds off the war."

"It ain't human nature to be neutral," says a neighbor, "but we can pretend."

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK — These are tense, realistic days to be writing about the flamenco wiles of a dancer from Andalusia, but since is concerns also the matadorial achievements of Miss Soledad Miralles, the lady bullfighter, kindly pretend that the world has no cares beyond the pleasures of the moment.

Miss Miralles arrived in New York the other morning after a zig-zag, hide-and-seek game with floating mines, submarines, and other hazards of a similar unpleasant nature, and at once was greeted by 16 relatives whom she had never seen before and who indeed had no idea that she even existed. Miss Miralles was certainly on the wing, and like birds of a feather she and her relatives recognized one another by means of a tribal mark close to the eye, a tiny cross that is burned on each semi-gypsy child, so that wherever she may wander thereafter in the world, members of her family-clan will recognize her.

In a Village restaurant later, while her sponsor, my friend Benito Collada, plunged an elegant fork into an elegant Argentine steak, she told all.

MISS MIRALLES is Spain's No. 2 lady bull fighter. Since male bullfighters are matadors, I suppose that would make her a matadette. In any case, she matadette (Ouch!) with Ben and me to see some of her new dances and hear some of her experiences in the bull rings of old Madrid.

Now there is no bull-fighting in America beyond the street-corner, or locker room variety, and so the limpid grace and the mercurical fleetness of movement by which the bull fighters and fightettes prevent themselves from being gored, has by this Senorita been incorporated into a variety of new Cape dances—she goes through a bull-fight without the bull. In other words, she shadow-dances, much as our prize fighters shadow box when they are in training.

BUT the cape dance is only a vague hint as to the repertoire of Miss Miralles, who is dark and black-eyed and excitably quick, and who can not sit still once the orchestra begins to play. She loves the flamencos which were brought into Spain by the Moors centuries ago. Each of these dances tells a story. Some of them must be little tragic folk-tales of grief-stricken lovers, for during them she never smiles. Others must be sagas of victory, for her eyes flash and her teeth gleam like the Puerto del Sol in the noonday sun. And there is one which she will not explain but which must have a personal significance, because when she dances it Ben and I are no longer there, as far as she is concerned. Her spirit seems to float out through the window and it doesn't come back until the music ends. Then Miss Miralles pulls herself back to the present and is among those present once more.

* * *

Miss Miralles is here for six weeks or so at the insistance of Senor Collada, who desires her talents for El Chico, a long-known much haunted sanctuary for the oppressed in Spirits who desire their relaxation with a bit of Spanish food and perhaps a little Spanish talk and a wee drop or so of Spanish wine. You will find it tucked away on Grove street in the Village, and you will find Senor Collada there, and the chances are that you will find me there too—as long as Miss Andalusia is around.

House Feels Embargo Fight Tension

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — The excited flood of mail protesting repeal of the arms embargo has shifted much of the tension from the senate to the house where public reaction traditionally causes more political heartburns.

Since two-thirds of the senate is largely immune at any one time to immediate political pressure, there is a greater zone of resistance to mail bombardments such as has grown surprisingly out of the present American "crisis."

In the house it is different. Members come up en masse every two years. They are coming up next year, each in his own balliwick. Don't discount any reports as to how responsive they are to mail attacks.

In the senate, two-thirds of the members can risk being "statesmen" even to the extent of voting against a flood of protests of their constituents. Many things may arise to rescue these senators from an irate constituency before their own election periods come around, two or four years hence. But in the house members must come face to face with their neighbors ad explain their acts almost as soon as they perform them.

The Mail or a Poll?

IT IS true that polls by the usual agencies point to a disposition of America to favor the Allies by the repeal of the arms embargo. But the congressional mail runs so overwhelmingly in the opposite direction that members of the house are truly worried about what to do. If thousands of their constituents, including grange members, legionnaires, literary clubs and just plain heckled Yankees, write in to protest the repeal, they have got to think a long time before they convince themselves whether the mail or public reaction polls are right.

We have run into several who remember or have read about the League of Nations fight. Public sentiment was overwhelmingly for the league. It sounded like peace. President Wilson was for it, and even if he hadn't kept us out of war, his word was good.

Yet within a half-dozen months sentiment had changed considerably. The two or three newspapers that had stood out from the throng and opposed Wilson were joined by hundreds more. The League went down. Its critics contended that the following election, in which the Democrats went down to defeat with the League as an issue, was final proof of U. S. repudiation. Cool historians are not so sure, but the politicians remember the change of sentiment, regardless of what it represented.

To a puzzled congressman, there is no sure way to guess which way the change may come. The polls say sentiment is one way and the mail says another.

It is true that the house passed a neutrality bill last session containing the arms embargo repeal, but the newly written bill must come back to it in some form, as it is vastly changed from the shape in which the house passed it.

More Wobbly Now.

THERE is really no spoofing about the mail. We stood in one senator's office while a new batch was counted. Of 34 letters opened—it was only a fraction of a stack—only two favored repeal. There were odds and ends of sizes of envelopes, so it was a fair representation, coming from several states.

In almost every bundle of mail delivered to the members are stacks of uniform-sized envelopes indicating that some enterprising club president has swung the members into a mass club action. Nevertheless, most of the stuff we have seen comes in odd sizes and odd handwritings and purveying the general protest in individualistic terms. It may be mob panic, but it certainly looks like the outpourings of troubled souls, regardless of whether it comes from the nation's mental froth.

The mollifying nature of the neutrality bill seems already to have softened some senate opposition, but the house is more wobbly than before.

Paying and Getting Back.

In the last five years the federal internal revenue collectors took nearly $2,000,000,000 out of Illinois. That is what we paid in income taxes, nuisance taxes, to the treasury in Washington. In the same period we got back a little less than half a billion dollars in WPA appropriations. To be exact, the WPA spent in Illinois 25.4 per cent of the receipts taken from the state.

For purposes of comparison the figures from some other states might be cited. The WPA spent in the state of Washington almost 75 per cent of the internal revenue collections from that state. In Oregon the figure was even higher, 83.9 per cent. In Montana the WPA spent 166 per cent of the state's contribution.

Coming closer home we find that Pennsylvania received a return of 37 per cent of its money; Ohio, 41 per cent; Indiana, 44 per cent; Wisconsin, 45 per cent; Iowa, 60 per cent; Nebraska, 81 per cent; Tennessee, 51 per cent. The corresponding figure for Illinois, as was said before, is 25.4 per cent.—Chicago Tribune.

Ohio Anecdotes

Election of 1851.

A story of a boyhood incident in the life of Reuben Wood, Democratic candidate, proved a vote-winner in the Ohio gubernatorial election of 1851.

Wood over-rode Samuel Vinton, Whig and U. S. senator, and Samuel Lewis, Free-Soiler, at the polls, after a campaign in which this story was repeatedly told:

Educated in Ohio, young Wood went to Canada at 15 to live with an uncle. There he studied the classics under a Catholic priest and read law under an attorney's tutelage. At the outbreak of the war of 1812 he fled Canada to escape military service with the British. He and a companion negotiated Lake Erie in an open boat.

Wood's performance in his first term merited his election a second time. He resigned, however, to become consul at Valparaiso.

Autumn Garden

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

THE last week in July I yielded to the urge to plant an autumn garden. Here about the place were left some Cobblers with great long sprouts. These I sorted, and dropped only the cleanest looking potatoes. Also I planted three bushels of Northern Russets. The patch looked well when I had finished, and my hopes were high.

Three long rows of late peas which I put in sprouted promptly and within six days three soft green lines showed across the field. I loved to watch, each morning, the new growth of leaves, and then the searching hairlike tendrils reaching out for some support.

On that same day I planted a goodly patch of beets and some cucumbers. In record time a sparse growth of sickly stalks emerged. I felt a sense of pity for their weakness. Only five plants grew to bear their yellow blooms. Less than two score of reddish, two-leaved, infant beet plants showed above the ground. I scored out the land once more and planted stringless green pod beans.

Since the time I put in the entire garden, it has rained three dashing showers, which ran off too quickly to be of much value. The other rain that fell was little more than dew. Each week I watched, with waning hope of a worthwhile harvest, the thrifty potato plants withering in the sun. Now the drying leaves roll up around the stems like shrouds. I dug two hills that held six spuds about the size of small, unhulled black walnuts. Three of them were eaten badly by the common grub.

The rows of peas are still green and have scattered bloom, more hopeful looking than last fall's mildewed vines. Light frost will not injure them and if good rains come, I expect a meagre crop.

I sowed late turnips on a half acre of well cultivated soil. Today I pulled one straggling plant and took a bit of the solid root. It was so hot that I burned my tongue, and I believe this one was the most edible one in the entire field.

The small flock of chickens has kept the beans free from Mexican beetles, and they bear blooms and small fleshy pods. We will have beans. Those same chickens peck the tomatoes as fast as they ripen on our late transplanted vines, so that I am forced to pick them almost green. However they ripen after picking and are furnishing enough for table use. No doubt I shall plant another garden late next summer. By the law of averages, the weather will not be always dry.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Don't be surprised if Herbert Hoover comes back into the international food relief picture with the express blessing of his political enemy, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Conversations to this effect have been taking place behind the scenes during the past week. They originated when friends of the ex-president began flooding the White House, Red Cross, and Jewish refugee committees with suggestions urging that Hoover head a new international relief set-up.

Those close to the White House had no idea that Roosevelt would respond, since there has been no love lost between the president and the ex-president. Advisers were amazed, however, when Roosevelt took the idea under serious consideration.

He suggested, in turn, that Mr. Hoover outline a definite plan. A great many ideas for war relief have flooded Washington with nothing concrete about them except that Mr. Hoover should take over the reins. None of them has been very practical, partly because only one country, Poland, is suffering and it is impossible greographically to reach it.

Those around the White House could not be sure whether the president was passing the buck back to Hoover, or whether he welcomed the idea of securing his services. Anyway that was what he did.

Note—It will be recalled that when the United States entered the World war, ex-President Theodore Roosevelt offered his services to the United States to head an immediate military expedition to France. Woodrow Wilson, whose relations with T. R. were comparable to those between F. D. R. and Hoover, was much embarrassed and vetoed Teddy's offer.

Hoover vs. Moley.

It is not supposed to be known, but when Professor Moley's articles, highly critical of Roosevelt, first appear in the Saturday Evening Post, Herbert Hoover sent word that he hoped the president would answer them.

Hoover asserted that in the part of the articles pertaining to him, Hoover, Moley had made 22 grievous errors, and that he would like to make a public statement to that effect.

Roosevelt sent word back that he didn't think it was a good idea to dignify the articles with a reply. He said that Moley was fond of quoting Elizabethan poets, but there was one quotation which Moley did not use. This was:

"Kings may love treason, but the traitor hate."

Lindbergh's Data.

Colonel Lindbergh gave some startling information regarding Germany's air force to the little group of senators with whom he lunched the other day. Among other things, he told them that Germany was about to launch a new type of bombing plane which could remain in the air for 48 hours, and which would be capable of flying across the Atlantic and back.

German factories have been perfecting this bomber ever since May and will have it in the air shortly. It is intended, not for raids across the Atlantic, but raids against shipping over the Atlantic.

In other words, these new German bombers would be able to swing far out beyond Ireland along the routes of trans-Atlantic steamers and remain in the air for two days scouting for ships. If the bombers are all that Lindbergh expects them to be, they should put a terrific crimp in British shipping.

Another startling piece of information which Lindbergh dropped at the private senatorial lunch was that Germany was developing a pursuit plane capable of reaching 500 miles an hour. This should be able to chase any Allied plane out of the skies.

European Air Strength.

Lindbergh also discussed at length the respective strength of the European air fleets. The Russian he brushed aside as not worth bothering about. Russia, he said, is turning out a lot of planes, but of poor quality.

German aviation, Lindbergh said, is now more than twice as strong as France and England combined. The French are slow and making poor progress, but the British, he said, are picking up and in six months should be abreast of the Germans. The quality of the new British planes is excellent, and they are not handicapped by lack of materials as are the Nazis.

Lindbergh said that the reason for the present British aerial inactivity was the fact that they could not risk an aerial showdown at present. Their air force is too weak. However, Lindbergh expects the German air force to deteriorate from now on because of difficulty in replacing both pilots and materials.

The United States, according to Lindbergh, soon will be in a position to equal the quality of Germany's planes. But it is backward in motor development, which the flying colonel attributes to lack of experimental laboratories.

Labor Board Probe.

Edmund Toland, general counsel of the special house committee investigating the National Labor Relations board, has a unique background with the agency which he is now investigating. He was attorney for six companies which had tangled with the board on charges of law violation.

It so happens that five of the companies are contributors to the National Manufacturers association, bitter foe of the NLRB. Toland also has represented the A. H. Arner company of St. Louis, and the Industrial Standard Service, which are specialists in supplying detectives and other labor-trouble aid.

Toland was appointed counsel by Chairman Howard Smith of Virginia, who bitterly fought the Wagner act when it was before congress and last session sought to weaken it. Smith is credited with a secret plan to propose new legislation modeled after a recent British measure giving the government drastic control over labor organizations.

Double Spanking.

That press conference spanking the president administered to his two war department lieutenants was no more amazing than the undercover episode that led up to it. This is the inside story of what happened:

Following the special cabinet meeting, Secretary Woodring showed Roosevelt a copy of a new book on the mobilization of business for war. The book contained a preface by Assistant Secretary Louis Johnson, Woodring's hated rival. Roosevelt is touchy on the subject of war plans while the embargo issue is before congress, and he didn't like the Johnson dedication. This was just what Woodring wanted. He urged Roosevelt to make it clear that Johnson had acted without official approval, and suggested that the press conference would provide an opportunity.

The president agreed and Woodring, a-twitter with glee over the fast one he had put over on his dynamic subordinate, rushed to the office of White House Secretary Steve Early to arrange for a newspaperman to ask a question of Roosevelt at the press conference that would enable Roosevelt to rebuke Johnson.

Early is a friend of Johnson's, wasn't very enthusiastic about helping Woodring. But orders were orders. He told Woodring to dictate the question and he would see that it was given to a newsman.

The correspondent picked for the job agreed to do it, but as he was going into the president's office, he discovered to his dismay that he didn't know the name of the book. However, he managed to make the question sufficiently clear so that Roosevelt got the cue. Roosevelt responded, but not as Woodring had expected.

The president slapped the secretary of war as well as the assistant secretary. With emphasis, Roosevelt revealed that Woodring had tattled on his subordinate and that he was miffed at both of them.

Merry-Go-Round.

Senator Pittman virtually gave the state department an ultimatum that he would handle the neutrality bill in the senate or else not handle it at all. He spurned all help from the outside . . . . Real fact is that razor-tongued Tom Connally of Texas has agreed to do the legislative interference. Also astute Jimmy Byrnes of South Carolina has been doing the backstage lining up of votes. . . . . Powerful support for the reappointment of Tom Woodward to the Maritime commission is coming from Roosevelt's uncle, Frederic Delano, and from certain shipping interests. Roosevelt had made up his mind to reappoint Woodward, but struck a snag in the opposition of Senator Guffey . . . . It is highly unlikely that any Soviet ships were sunk by submarines in the neighborhood of Estonia. It is more probable that the Russians were merely looking for an excuse to seize Estonia . . . British economists are predicting that Hitler's economy will break after eight months. But economy doesn't break when a nation is victorious —especially when Hitler is able to get labor at slave wages.

LOGAN'S DEATH HALTS DEBATE

Kentucky Senator, Roosevelt Supporter, Stricken; Oratory on Neutrality Delayed.

the possibility that Gov. A. B. Chandler might resign in favor of Lieutenant-Governor Keen Johnson and then be appointed to the senate vacancy.

Logan was among the foremost fighters for President Roosevelt's court reorganization program of 1937, lending to the debate much of the judicial experience acquired back home.

He was the ranking member of the senate military committee, chairman of the claims committee, and a member of the judiciary committee he was listed as a supporter of the administration's neutrality bill.

Tentative arrangements called for funeral services at Bowling Green probably Thursday and burial at Brownsville, Ky., where he was born.

He was a Baptist and a leader in the Odd Fellows' fraternal organization.

Surviving are a widow, three sons and a daughter. The home is at Bowling Green.

Logan's death was the second in the senate this year, Senator Lewis (D-Ill), having died April 9.

Hope Borah's Speech Will Arouse Nation.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Trying feverishly to block repeal of the arms embargo, senate foes of the administration neutrality program counted heavily today on the address of Senator Borah (R-Idaho) to arouse countrywide support for their stand.

The administration forces, however, were jubilant after a recheck of their rolls gave 57 votes for repeal. One of their group, Senator Minton (D-Ind.), declared that opposition oratory would not change two votes.

Borah was loudly applauded when he closed the first day of the historic senate debate on neutrality yesterday with the assertion that sale of munitions would mean sending American boys "back to the slaughter pens of Europe."

He followed Senator Pittman (D-Nev.), who opened the administration case by contending that the arms embargo unfairly aided Germany.

There were a few predictions that debate might last only two weeks, but adjournment today out of respect to Senator Logan (D-Ky.), who died early this morning, meant a one-day delay. Senator Connally (D-Tex.), had been assigned to carry on the administration argument, with Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) following him for the opposition.

In contrast to the senate's usual rough-and-tumble style of argument, yesterday's session was formal and orderly. Both Pittman and Borah read their speeches, and there were only a few sharp interchanges.

Borah argued that requiring belligerents to take title to their purchases before shipping them—as the administration bill proposes—would invite attacks on American factories.

"If a manufacturing plant, we will say, is located at Wilmington, Del., engaged in shipping munitions to Great Britain, will the antagonists wait until title has passed?" he asked.

"Will not every munitions manufacturing plant, every arsenal in the United States, be spotted for destruction?"

Borah appeared to tire in the latter half of his speech. His voice was weaker, and he occasionally leaned forward with his hands on his desk.

After the senate adjourned yesterday, leaders of both sides continued working out a program for the remainder of the debate.

Senator Glass (D-Va.), who has been ill, may make a brief talk later for the administration bill, although friends have suggested that he merely give a radio speech from his hotel apartment.

Senator Tobey (R-NH) talked with both Democratic and Republican leaders in an effort to have the bill split into two parts. He asked that all provisions except the embargo repeal be acted on at once, and that the latter be disposed of after further debate. Democratic chieftains opposed the idea.

SEES STARES OF THE WAR'S DEAD

Knickerbocker Watches as Silent Frenchmen Bring Up Slain Nazis to Lines.

fathers twenty years ago their belt buckles bore the slogan "Gott Mit Uns" (God With Us.)

Col. Horace Fuller and Col. Sumner Waite, military attaches of the United States army, who accompanied us, remarked on the good quality of their uniform cloth and the leather in their old fashioned boots. They were only two out of an estimated 700 German dead on the western front so far in this war and that is considered a very tiny figure.

But we also stood today beside a tiny group of fresh French graves in a cemetery along tehe Maginot line and we realized that no peace offensive can succeed now. Because the war already has gained too much momentum and claimed too many victims to come to an end without a decision.

That decision, we were convinced today, will lie with the allies. The first sight of the Maginot line at any rate carried to the layman and expert alike the knowledge that this line could never be broken by any conceivable military power. That is to say that although victory may be difficult for the allies to achieve, in the long run it is impossible for the Germans to ochieve.

We drove past forests of barbed wire and of what the army calls "asparagus," the latter consisting of steel rails imbedded in concrete and arranged at irregular heights to check and overturn tanks.

Inside these miles of lethal obstruction stand the hundreds of "works" of forts, which, connected underground, constitute the heart of the Maginot line extending, with its east and west wings from the English channel to Switzerland.

We were led through one of these monster fortifications which, however, was described as only a medium sized one. Entering a tunnel at its bottom we were taken through thousands of yards of corridors. We saw a power plant, great stores of fuel and food, barracks for 600 men and every facility for them to stand off a siege for practically an indefinite time even if they were wholly surrounded, which the construction of the line makes impossible.

The climax to the visit came when we climbed into a great turret and looked through the bore of one of the famous French Seventy-five's out onto the fields which the Germans would have to storm if they expected to break through the line.

The turret was exactly like that of a battleship, rising clear to fire and sinking under ground when attacked. Its rounded top is a steel cap 18 inches thick and the entire turret is surrounded with a jacket of reenforced concrete 24 feet thick.

Mary Ellen, 6, were among the four persons injured in the crash. Both were reported improving today at General hospital.

Vernon Fowler of Jeromesville, critically hurt in the crash, regained consciousness today for the first time since he was taken to General hospital Saturday afternoon. His condition was reported slightly improved. Fowler's companion, Hugh Hootman, 18, of Jeromesville, was able to leave the hospital and return home Monday afternoon.

Although Richardson denied blame for the crash, Prosecutor Marriott said witnesses reported he pulled away from a filling station directly in the path of Fowler's car. Both machines were headed west toward Mansfield.

Fowler's auto sideswiped the one operated by Richardson and swerved into the path of another driven by Goon, causing them to crash head-on, witnesses said.

Richardson told county authorities he was passing a parked car at the side of the highway when Fowler's car struck the left rear fender of his car. Richardson is a native Cuban.

THREE POINTS IN HITLER PLAN for the reichstag session, to be held late this week.

It was reported that the Hitler speech would be couched in concrete terms and would contain suggestions for a peace basis, and not merely be a generalized bid for a vague peace.

Nazis refused to forecast the possible contents of the speech except to say that Germany and Russia had divided Poland and that there could be no discussion of the acts of the Nazi-Communist axis.

As regards Italy, Nazis said that if peace bids failed, there would be further conversations with Mussolini regarding "joint measures" to "bring the war to an end within the shortest possible time," and negotiations also with Russia.

Despite the implications of this statement, well informed quarters expressed belief that so far neither Italy nor Russia had promised Germany any military aid as part of what the Nazis called "joint measures."

Joachim Von Ribbentrop, foreign minister, was believed to have told Ciano that Germany and Russia had concluded no agreement which would infringe Italy's interests in the Balkans.

It was reported that Ribbentrop said also that Germany did not intend to try to Germanize Poland, but that at the same time it did not intend to form a Polish "independent" state.

As Russia thrust its way further into the Baltic, Nazis increasingly indicated that Hitler had given Stalin a free hand there, in effect surrendering any claim to Lithuania as a part of the German "sphere of influence."

NO QUESTIONS

Whether neutrality means an embargo aiding Hitler or lifting it giving allies access to supplies, puzzles Legionnaires assembled at Chicago, who appoint committeec to decide. Seems that men who know war, would decide neutrality—which must aid one side—as that which would assist in promoting a just peace.

Forget New Love Advisor Says

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

When I had barely passed my 16th birthday, I married, and a year later we had a darling little baby boy, who is now three years old. Up to the present time I felt that my husband meant everything to me. About two months ago, I became acquainted with a young man, who seems to be the one I really care for. I haven't told anyone, but it seems as though I should go crazy trying to keep it to myself.

This young man has shown in many different ways that he too loves me. My husband tells me he loves me, but doesn't try to keep me happy by taking me out or asking friends in, so that we could have a little social life. It just seems impossible for me to get along without this new-found love. What can I do?

UNHAPPY.

Your "darling little baby boy" is the answer to your problem, my dear. If you do a mother's duty by him, you will not let yourself imagine that you have found somewhere else the love of your life. This so often happens when a girl marries as young as you have and doesn't have a chance to enjoy youth and all the fun and admiration which is youth's due.

The young man knows you are married and have a boy. Don't risk losing home, husband and child for the slight chance of happiness involved in this temporary affair. Courage and common sense, my dear, is your keynote. Try to recapture the fancy of your husband, get him to take you out occasionally. A little cooperation is up to him also.

Keeping Smart On Clothes

By MME. QUI VIVE

Every woman has a beauty credo. Maybe she has a yen for ruffles and flounces, yearns to wear a rose in her hair. Or she can't bear fluff, loves her tailor mades. All right if the habiliments suit her. Sometimes they do, sometimes they don't. It is not safe to have fixed ideas That's the trouble with the frumpy woman. She rebels against change. She sticks to her dismal colors and ugly lines nobody can divorce her from them.

Many an overdressed woman would blossom into a lady of fashion if some good dressmaker with a seeing eye could take her and her clothes apart, put them together again, deleting senseless ornaments and general junk that has no place in the sartorial picture. And here's a suggestion to her.

Observe the overdressed middle aged woman, more or less faded, who can't accustom herself to the fact that she is no longer within finger touch of her youth. She wears cutie clothes, skirts to her knees, ties on her hat with ribbons under her chin. Then there are the young women who go into sartorial reverse by wearing dreary clothes, middle-aged hats, do their hair in a coiffure at which their grandmothers would turn up their dignified noses.

* * *

Blessed with good taste and an understanding of what is appropriate for every occasion, social or otherwise, a woman cannot go wrong on dress and makeup.

An appreciation of line and color is essential to charming appearance.

There are colors that make one feel as if one had been kicked in the stomach, they are so ugly and appalling. Yet some women wear them.

Making oneself pictorial in the correct and modern manner is a pleasing and satisfying occupation. Also, it's fun. You can't be successful at the game if you pick up frocks, hats and coats casually, take whatever appeals to your fancy. You must remember what is to be worn with them, what the completed picture that is YOU will be.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"Olina says you want to speak to me, Auntie Madge," Mary said as they came up to us.

"Yes, to both you and Noel," I replied, and Olina, who evidently had not looked closely at her mother, turned toward the door of the room where we had left Noel.

"I'll just gather up my music," she said, "and leave you to yourselves."

"That will be entirely unnecessary," her mother said crisply. "I gathered up all your music, every sheet of it, and have it here. It will please me if you accompany me now back to our rooms."

Has to Detour.

Olina evidently knew when she had reached a stone wall, and she promptly detoured.

"Of course, Maman," she said sweetly, and our two royal guests walked down the hall together.

"Someday I'm going to take that gal apart with my bare hands Mary said. "You should have seen the impudence of her coming in and spoiling all our good times. If Noel weren't such a lamb and so polite, he'd have told her off for fair this morning, but that fantastic chivalrous courtesy toward anything in skirts, which he's inherited from that father of his, won't let him do anything but play the social game.

"But I'm afraid I'm going to forget I'm a lady if she pulls many more tricks like the one she pulled this morning. Bringing all that music in and saying she had come to an impasse, and would Noel please help her out. After that she was dashing in and out every few minutes, I suppose dancing attendance upon her mother in the intervals so she wouldn't catch on what the gal was really up to."

"Well!" I said smiling, "she's caught on now, with a vengeance, and I don't think you'll have much more trouble with Olina. If her royal mother hasn't a chalk mark laid out for her daughter to walk, then my powers of observation are failing."

"Do you really think so?" Mary asked, brightening.

"I'm sure of it," I said, and slipped by hand through her arm. "So just put the provoking princess out of your mind, and come back with me into your room. I have things to say to you and Noel."

She caught my hand and gave it a little squeeze.

"It sounds terribly important," she said.

"It is," I returned.

"'Lo, Noel," she addressed her young husband blithely, but he looked at her glumly.

"If ever you play a trick like that on me again—"he said darkly, and left the prophecy in the air.

"I know, darling," Mary said contritely, "but she was so anxious to get you alone, and was so diabolical in registering her conviction that I didn't dare leave you alone with her—"

"Mary!" he exclaimed in outraged accents. "She's annoying enough, goodness knows! But she never said anything like that."

"Of course she didn't, you gander," Mary said airily. "She's not crass, that lady, and she didn't need to say anything like that. It was a song without words she was humming, and she sure got it over to me."

"But why should you punish me?" Noel asked querulously. "I wasn't trying to put anything over on you."

"Are you sure it was a punishment?" Mary asked slyly, and Noel's pained and bewildered look brought a protest from me.

"Stop it, Mary!" I said sharply. "That's not fair, teasing Noel that way when he's still an invalid. Besides, I want to tell you of the latest thing Mr. Veritzen has planned."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

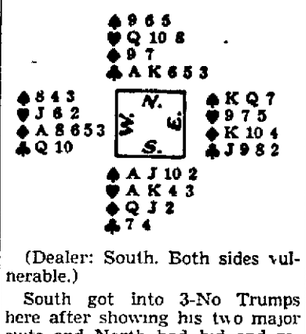
"The Authority on Authorities"

IT WORKS BOTH WAYS

Most of us think of the hold-up play as part of the declarer's equipment. It can also be vitally important to the defenders, especially to the man who has led against No Trump from his long suit and later lets the second trick in it go by so that he can win the third. Usually this is done only when the hand contains no side re-entry.



(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

South got into 3-No Trumps here after showing his two major suits and North had bid and rebid his clubs

West opened his diamond 5 to the K, East returning the 10. When South played the J on it, West came in with the A and returned his 3 to the Q, clearing the suit. The declarer then went to the heart Q, led the spade 9 and let the Q win. East could not return a diamond, so the declarer made 4-No Trumps.

Had West let the declarer make the second diamond trick he would have beaten the contract. When the declarer eventually lost a spade to East, the latter could have returned his third diamond and the remainder of that suit could have been run.

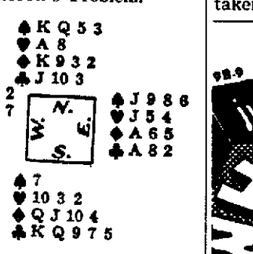
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

What is the best bidding of this deal?

FHA OPERATIONS HAVE INFLUENCE ON U.S. ECONOMY

Favorable Opinion Should Be Matter of Pride on Part of Participants.

The beneficial effects which the operations of the Federal Housing Administration have had on national economy during the past five years are "unquestioned and should be matters of pride to the financial institutions and all others who have participated in the program," Administrator Stewart McDonald has declared in reviewing FHA attainments since enactment of the National Housing Act on June 27, 1934.

McDonald's comments on the accomplishments under the FHA program during its first five years appear in a recent issue of The Insured Mortgage Portfolio, official publication of the Federal Housing Administration.

Figures Cited.

Citing figures from the record of operations to show how far the Federal Housing Administration has moved toward achievemnt of its fundamental purpose, McDonald said:

"Private lending institutions had advanced $839,559,606 in property-improvement loans through June 30. During June they reported the largest volume of any one month since the revival of the Modernization Credit Plan in February 1938.

"Under Title II, lending institutions had submitted and the FHA had selected for appraisal home mortgage loans aggregating $3,011,054,561. From year to year there has been a constantly rising volume of home building under this title. A broad and healthy recovery in such construction has occurred, particularly since the passage of the 1938 amendments to the act a year ago last February.

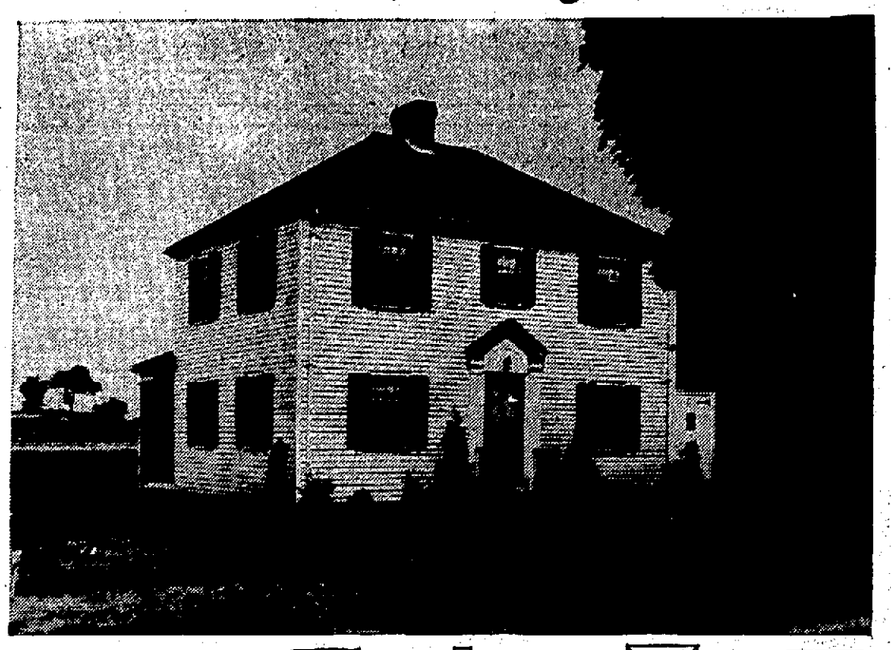
"Under the rental-housing phase of the program (this including all developments under Sections 207 and 210 of the act), 313 mortgages, aggregating $126,369,475, had been accepted for insurance through June 30. Of these, 224, aggregating $99,636,775, were premium paying as of that date, and involved properties, completed or under construction, designed to house 25,925 families."

Coal Bins Must Be Fitted For Actual Demands

Basement space is at a premium in most homes as a result of the modern demand for recreation rooms, and because of that the home owner who contemplates installation of a coal bin should gage his need and construct the bin to fit his demand.

A ton of coal will occupy about 45 cubic feet of space. Convenient storage of coal should be such that the depth is not over 4½ feet.

Frame Colonial, New England Home



This dignified New England home represents a type of construction typically American. Its interior arrangement is as traditional as its simple interior. Lack of waste space, a feeling of spaciousness, and honesty of architectural design make this home preferred by many over less conventional plans. Given a valuation of $6,700 by FHA officials, this home was built in Massachusetts with the aid of a mortgage for $5,000 insured by the FHA.

Note change in appearance and increased use of chromium. Pontiacs are handled in Mansfield by Weidner Motor Sales, 22 East Second street.

MORTGAGE PLAN REDUCES HOME FINANCING COST

Monthly Payments Now Lower Than Under Previous Setup, FHA Announcement Says.

Definite examples in the files of the Federal Housing Administration demonstrate the revolution that the home-mortgage insurance system has brought about in home-financing terms, according to Administrator Stewart McDonald.

"The largest group of borrowers under the Federal Housing Administration plan have incomes from $2,000 to $2,500 a year," Mr. McDonald pointed out. "In 1938 a typical family in that group with an income of about $2,230 a year paid approximately $4,900 for a new house and assumed a mortgage for $4,100, or 84 per cent of the value. On that mortgage its monthly payment was $26, or 14.1 per cent of its monthly income.

"Before the advent of the mortgage-insurance program such a transaction could not have been financed, apart from exceptional cases, without resorting to a second mortgage or a land contract. When such financing was used the purchase price was customarily padded to cover discount on the second mortgage, and the payments would have been not less than $40 to $50 a month. In other words, an equivalent house would not have been available to a family with such an income without unwarranted sacrifice and excessive danger of losing its equity.

"Further, a family buying such a house, even with a larger income, would have been subject to hazards and expenses in connection with renewing the financing if it had not been lucky enough to obtain a fully amortized mortgage running for perhaps 10 or 12 years."

PAINTING SHIPS' BOTTOMS

It is claimed that paint for use on ship's bottoms are greatly improved by the addition of copper bronze and copper linoleate as the toxic agents. Still another suggested method is the use of spirit varnishes containing arsenic trioxide and mecuric chloride. Preferred pigments are carbon black, lithopone, chrome yellow, ochre and iron oxide applied over a priming coat of red lead.

Incinerator Now Available With Slight Expense

A new type of incinerator now available for homes requires no auxiliary fuel and little installation expense and may be built into the heating flue by any qualified mason. Funds for installation of such incinerators may be obtained from qualified lending institutions under the Modernization Credit Plan of the Federal Housing Administration.

Two separate combustion chambers are provided for garbage and dry rubbish. Two cast-iron shaker grates and a drawer type ash pan facilitate removal of the ashes. Heat from dry refuse burning in the lower compartment dries the wet garbage above and sets it afire.

COLOR FOR BRIDGES

An eminent artist and decorator has sugegsted painting bridges some other color than the conventional black and gray. "Bridges," he observes, "have design lines and definite silhouettes—just like anything else, but nobody seems to have thought how interesting and helpful it would be to paint a bridge with colors to bring out its lines of beauty or to make it merge and become an integral part of the landscape (or city-scape) to which it is fastened at either end."
